

THE ISĀVĀSYOPANIṢAD-BHĀṢYA OF VENKATĀNĀTHA

INTRODUCTION

This is the first of the Upaniṣad-bhāṣyas according to Viśiṣṭādvaita Philosophy undertaken for being translated into English with critical notes. The importance of this kind of work need hardly be exaggerated. Philosophy and Religion, it will be seen, owe their deepest inspiration to the fine and excellent Theism breathing through these Upaniṣads. Through the ages, the culture of India was imbibed from these unfailing springs of spiritual consciousness that had its roots in Divine Knowledge, Divine Action and Divine Devotion culminating in Divine Birth. The necessity to rescue philosophy and Religion from futilities of political and social inertia is everywhere felt. A Divine consciousness must once more take possession of our entire being and transmute us and lead us on the Divine Path. Such a promise is eminently capable of being fulfilled by students and practisers of the Īśvara-Yoga.

I

THE LIFE AND PHILOSOPHY OF ŚRĪ VENKATĀNĀTHA

Śrī Venkatānātha, the most important thinker of the Viśiṣṭādvaita-School of Philosophy after Rāmānuja, was born at Tūppul, a suburb of Kāūci (modern Conjeevaram), in the tamil month of Purattāsi of the year Viḍhava corresponding to the 17th September 1268 A. D. As Śrī Venkatānātha was born under the asterism Śravaṇa, the asterism of Śrī Venkateśa of the famous Tirumalai shrine, he was named after him. Tradition has it that Śrī Venkatānātha's father Ananta Sūri and mother Totārammā visited the shrine some time before their illustrious son was born to them, and that one night they dreamt that the Lord of the shrine sent His bell to incarnate as their son. The story is testified to by Śrī Venkatānātha himself in his drama Saṅkalpaśūryodaya.¹

Śrī Venkatānātha had a heritage suited to his genius. He was a lineal descendent of a personal disciple of Śrī Rāmānuja through his father.² Through his mother he was related to Śrī Rāmānuja's personal disciple and nephew Praṇatārtihara, otherwise known as the Vedānta Udayanācārya. Praṇatārtihara had a grandson and a grand daughter, the former was the famous author of Nyāya-Kulīśa, Rāmānuja, and the latter was the mother of Śrī Venkaṭanātha. Thus from his infancy, he grew up in the midst of the tradition of Śrī Rāmānuja's philosophy.

Śrī Venkaṭanātha was brought up by his uncle, Ātreya Rāmānuja familiarly known as Appullār. Śrī Venkaṭanātha manifested signs of being a genius. His memory was very keen and he required no second reading. His extraordinary retentive powers in this respect were displayed, it seems, on more than one occasion. When very young and yet a child his remarkable memory was manifested when he assisted in giving the cue to the great Naḍātūr Vātsya Varadācārya in one of his discourses. The manner he seems to have done this was still more remarkable, as he seems to have done this without violating the injunction of the scriptures not to repeat the scriptural text without proper instruction from a Guru.

When he reached the appropriate age he was initiated into spiritual life by his uncle and he continued to study everything under him. He completed all his studies by his twentieth year. His knowledge was encyclopædic and this fundamental equipment of his studies is displayed in his very early works too.

He married about his twentieth year. His married life seems to have been very fortunate. It shows none of those conflicts that so much marred the life of Śrī Rāmānuja. On the contrary he was excellently married, and his life as a householder was an ideal one. Happy nations as a rule have no history to leave behind them, so too happy couples. When Śrī Venkaṭanātha pleads for the life of a householder as more befitting to man than the more arduous saṁnyāsin's, one can infer that married life is a life of responsibility to oneself and to one's community and race, which, provided it is lived properly, will yield the highest bliss possible to the human being on this planet. We cannot say exactly how long it lasted or how long his wife lived. We only know that he was a father of a son about his forty-seventh year of life, nearly twenty-eight years after his marriage (1316 / D.).

Soon after his marriage Śrī Venkaṭanātha went to Tiruvah̄ndrapuram (near Modern Cuddalore, South Arcot district), a beautiful hamlet situated on the banks of the river Garuḍa (Gadilam). This was the period of perfect preparation and meditation and penance. He attained in the course of his first two years there, miraculous powers from Śrī Hayagrīva (Śrī Viṣṇu of the form of Hayagrīva) and also from Garuḍa. Perhaps it is through their blessings he turned to melodious versification and produced hymns in praise of Devanāyaka and Hayagrīva. It was also during this period he began his discourses on the Śrī Bhāṣya, Bhagavad-Gītā and on the secret doctrines of the Viśiṣṭādvaita. He also became a master of arts and crafts, and attained such proficiency as to be called Sarvatantra-śatāntra.¹

His life at Tiruvahindrapuram seems to have lasted about twenty years. He exemplified in himself the profoundest wisdom of the Upaniṣads and Prabandham. For him, ordinary life regulated and governed by total surrender to the Lord is no menace to spiritual communion and development. All actions prescribed by the scripture have to be performed, for there is no way open to man other than service of the Divine. A life of renunciation (vairāgya) can go along with the human conditions of love and possession of children. He seems to have followed uñcha-vṛtti the profession of begging for rice for his daily needs, thus typifying utter dependency for maintenance on God to whose service he had consecrated himself.

It is just possible that Śrī Venkaṭanātha became conscious of his mission in life about this time. It is one of those recurring facts of psychological consciousness of a sect or community, religious or secular, to seek to endow their chief teacher or messiah, who had brought unity and solace to that community, with all the glory of a son of God. Supernatural claims have always been made on behalf of almost all great personalities. It has great value and evangelical force during the period of the mission. The leaders themselves because of their sincere and abiding consciousness of their duty to their God, accept the mantle of this great responsibility. Śrī Venkaṭanātha was no exception to this. The dream prophecy was there. He had to accept the mantle that God had destined him for. His abiding concern seems to have been to dispel the darkness and demoniac fury of unspiritual forces encircling his community, whilst himself increasing the spiritual light and power of his own community. This twofold purpose of destruction of anti-spiritual forces and increasing of spiritual forces, or in the words of the Īśvāsyopaniṣad, increasing the birth-forces whilst destroying the death-forces seems to have been his main concern. It is this consciousness, tri-polar as it is, that pervades like the perfume eternal, the entire conduct of Śrī Venkaṭanātha. In all his works there is mastery as well as complete surrender to the Divine. In all his dealings there is the sacred presence of divine humility. It is this that has made him the most relentless opponent of all that is trash and trivial, and an admirer of all that is noble and lofty and godly.

His life of preparation for the great mission having been over, he started on a pilgrimage tour to the famous shrines sprinkled all over India, this being one of the most important duties of every Hindu. He left for Kāñci, and on the way, he visited the famous Tirukoilūr temple where he composed the Dehaliśa-stuti, on the Lord Dehaliśa who manifested Himself to the first three Ālvārs, Poygai, Bhūta and Pey.

His stay at Kāñci was short. Like the Ālvārs, he composed a hymn on the most important shrines he visited in South India. He composed a hymn at Kāñci on Varadarāja—the Varadarāja-pāñcāśat. His next halt was at Tirupati, where he composed the magnificent Dayā-śataka on his patron Deity. From Tirupati he seems to have visited Śrīśaila, Ahobilam and other places. He proceeded to the north visiting the famous places of History of Rāma and Śrī Kṛṣṇa and Badari and Jagannāth Pūri. On his return journey he seems to have visited Tirupati and then Kāñci. This journey seems to have lasted about five years. We do not have any detailed account about this itinerary. There are no compositions or praises on any deity in the Northern India.

No sooner than he returned to Kāñci, he was invited to Śrīrangam to take part in a debate with an advaitic scholar in the year 1310 A. D. The leaders at Śrīrangam were unable to meet the arguments advanced by the advaitic scholar, and as Śrī Venkaṭanātha inherited the mantle of Śrī-Bhāṣya-simhāsanādhipati and Prabandha-simhāsanādhipati, after the demise of his uncle Ātreya Rāmānuja, he was invited to refute those arguments. Śrī Venkaṭanātha successfully refuted the arguments of the advaitic teacher¹ and thus won for himself laurels and encomium. He was given the title of Vedāntācārya—the master-teacher of Vedānta.² He was now the acknowledged leader of the Philosophy of Viśiṣṭādvaita. The two divisions of the Śrī Vaiṣṇava thought, the northern and southern which Śrī Rāmānuja had unified in his person after Yāmunaācārya, tended to fall asunder, as the seat of the Chief of Śrī Vaiṣṇavism had to be at two capitals. Kāñci had always been the seat of great literary activity not merely of Viśiṣṭādvaita but also of all other

1. It appears that the Advaitic teacher was one Kṛṣṇa Mīśra. We are not able to state definitely whether this was the author of the Prabodha-candrodaya. But it is likely.

Venkaṭanātha. No surprise then that Śrī Venkaṭanātha was affectionately and admiringly called the Ācārya. To speak about Deśika is to speak about Viśiṣṭādvaita. The dream and wish of Yāmunācārya got its fullest realization in the person of Śrī Venkaṭanātha¹.

This was the peak of his life. His mission was started under excellent auspices. Everywhere there was admiration for the master. In 1316 A. D. Śrī Venkaṭanātha was the proud father of a boy who, it appears, possessed all the great qualities of his illustrious father. It was as if the life of completest happiness was vouchsafed for Śrī Venkaṭanātha.

But the life that promised such a luminous future was assailed by petty jealousies. The tendentious activities of rival schools began to manifest uncomfortable forebodings of a disruption. Unfortunately it began to centre round the person of Śrī Venkaṭanātha. Personal insults, slights and even severe man-handling seem to have taken place. People began to refuse co-operation to him in the performance of oblations to his manes; a row of sandals was hung at the door-step of his residence so that it could strike him when he came out. These trials on his patience made him understand that despite all that he could do to soothen the embittered feelings, and despite his will to treat them as of no serious concern, and despite his general sense of humour, he was not wanted at Śrīrangam. Thus he left Śrīrangam about the year 1319 A.D. for Satyamangalam on the borders of Mysore unwilling to be the cause of serious cleavage in the community. It was perhaps during this period between 1310 and 1319 A. D. he was challenged to compose in one night a poem on the sandals of Śrī Ranganātha by a member of the rival community, which he did, on the completion of which his superior mastery in composition was acknowledged by the grant of the title "Kavitārkikasinha" to him by the learned assembly of Judges. That work is known as Pāḍukū-Sahasram. It is also probable that Śrī Venkaṭanātha composed the Saṅkalpa-sūryodaya about this time.

After a few years, lasting about five years, he seems to have been once again called upon to refute another Advaitic scholar at Śrīrangam. Śrī Venkaṭanātha returned to Śrīrangam and defeated the opponent through the offices of his disciple Brahma-tantra-svāmī. It is presumably as a result of these series of debates that Śrī Venkaṭanātha composed the Śata-dūṣaṇi so as to be helpful to the students and teachers of Viśiṣṭādvaita to refute the opposing schools. It is also likely that the Paramata-bhāṅga was composed with the same intention.

It appeared that after the cloud of mistrust and jealousy that marred his life between 1319 A.D. and 1325 A.D., there had come after all the bright sunshine. But this was not to be. Scarcely a year afterwards the invading hordes of Malik Kafur were pressing downwards into South India carrying with them the flames of relentless persecution and massacre and vandalism. Idol-worship or rather Pratimā-worship, which is one of the most important elements of Śrī Vaiṣṇava religion, was assailed. Idols of worship were removed from the sanctuaries to interior places for fear of desecration and spoilation and mutilation. Śrīraṅgam underwent this fiery ordeal in 1326 A.D. Śrī Vedānta Deśika, Śrī Pillai Lokācārya and other eminent leaders of Vaiṣṇavism had to flee. People numbering ten thousand staunch devotees, were massacred in attempting to stem the onslaught of the Moslem leader, whilst Śrī Vedānta Deśika and Śrī Pillai Lokācārya hurried away from the city in possession of the Śrūta-prakāśikā-commentary on the Śrī-Bhāṣya and the Image of Śrīraṅganātha. After some arduous journey Śrī Venkaṭanātha went to Mysore. It is likely that his son and wife were living at Satyamangalam at this time or were sent to that place just previous to the invasion apprehending danger. So much so, there is no mention of them in this escapade from Śrīraṅgam.

After some years spent in the old place of exile of Śrī Rāmānuja, Tirunārāyaṇapuram, he seems to have returned to his old haunt Satyamangalam in 1335 A. D. It is recounted that during this period of exile, his old friend Śrī Vidyārāya Swāmin, the minister of king Bukka I, the founder of the Vijayanagar, the capital of the great Empire of Vijayanagar—the never-to-be-forgotten Empire, invited Śrī Venkaṭanātha to reside at the Court of Vijayanagar, obviously moved by the impeccable circumstances of Śrī Venkaṭanātha. It appears that though moved by this offer, Śrī Venkaṭanātha courteously declined this honour and help, with five verses breathing rare beauty and humility. He was content to enjoy the wealth that God had infinitely given him, the wealth of knowledge¹. For him there was no place for compromise in religious life just as there was no compromise with falsity.

1 cf. The ideal of the Īśa, 1 & cf. Janaka's famous couplet "Anantam bata me vittaṁ"

Śrī Vedānta Deśika continued to live a quiet and peaceful life delivering lectures and discourses on the many points of the doctrine. He had already written innumerable hymns, controversial works and commentaries, and composed original kāvya. It was in every sense a peaceful period. As usual his disciples flocked to him at this new shrine of power (Satyamangalam was also known as Śaktimangalam). There was only one dark cloud, the cloud that darkened the sky of Hindu Religion. It was only about thirty years afterwards that the Hindu Empire founded at Vijayanagar grew sufficiently powerful to drive out the invaders. It is stated that sorely grieved Śrī Venkaṭanātha composed the Abhīti-stava about this time. Almost in response to this cry of the devotee, the Lord seems to have, through the instrumentality of one Gopapārya, a General stationed at Gingee, driven out the last of the invaders from Śrī-rangam and installed the Idol of Śrīranganātha who had been moved from place to place during those thirty years. This was in 1361 A. D. Knowing this fact, Śrī Venkaṭanātha returned to Śrīrangam rejoicing in this answer to his prayers. The two verses that he wrote praising the services of Gopapārya are even today to be seen incised on the wall at Śrī-rangam.

Having lived a full life of service (kaiṅkarya) in the cause of the philosophy of Śrī Rāmānuja, Śrī Vedānta Deśika passed away in the month of Karthigai Saumya year 1369 A. D. Thus came to an end a great epoch in Viśiṣṭādvaita.

The philosophy of Śrī Venkaṭanātha cannot be summarised within the short compass of an introduction. But certain general outlines can be drawn. The Philosophy of Śrī Venkaṭanātha is identical with that of Śrī Rāmānuja, and it is considered that the great merit of Śrī Venkaṭanātha's writings lies in the synthesis and correlation that he has made between the several thinkers who preceded him. He has referred to almost all his predecessors and has criticised them or supplemented their views with arguments revealing wealth of understanding altogether unsurpassed. His life was on the philosophical side consecrated to unravelling the intricate points of philosophical value which might lead to a synthetic understanding of the Vedic and Upaniṣadic literature and Prabandhic thought. This of course was necessitated by the tendency of many followers of the central thought of Rāmānuja to interpret onesidedly. On the other hand, the constant revival of philosophical disputations between rival sects or philosophies imposed on the philosopher the obligation to substantiate his difficult Organistic view-point. It is more easy to accept a materialistic monism or pluralism or a spiritualistic monism or pluralism, but it is difficult to tread the path of Synthesis that orders all existence or reality on the basis of a central principle of Organic relationship. This difficult task to which he addressed himself required prodigious labour and persistent attention to details. It is usual for most philosophers to take a very comprehensive view without entering into the manifold details of the scheme or order adumbrated. That satisfies superficial souls or believers but that cannot satisfy the carping critic who would insist upon the manifold details being filled up. This was the task imposed on the leader, and Śrī Venkaṭanātha, the giant he was, undertook the working out of the innumerable details of the system • not only on its philosophical side, but also wherever the philosophical passed into praxis and ethics, and all this without losing the fundamental basis of spiritual consciousness of the One All-abiding Divine. This radiant man, spurning all pomp and power and self, tenacious and zealous in the cause of promoting a better understanding of the relation between God and man and the world, confident about himself, trusting in God, ever at the service of truth, deeply learned in the thought and knowledge of all the literature, whether sanskritic or tamil or prākṛit, a venerable teacher and fierce antagonist, compelling absolute obedience of his disciples, a patient craftsman and rigid follower of the śāstraic injunctions,—Śrī Venkaṭanātha—was the very embodiment of the spirit of Viśiṣṭādvaita. We find that his main desire has been to show the good life, the life that God has imposed or has ordered in the world. The path of realization is not through mere intellectual understanding nor mere works, but through Devotion, Bhakti, which includes the performance of works as well as understanding. The cognitive and conative faculties of man should be directed by the power of devotion to the highest reality, the Self of all, and become the Vision of integral Unity. This devotion can be manifested fully and integrally through the understanding of the integral or organic unity of dependence on the Supreme Being, the Lord, who is the final Object of our life (parama-puruṣārtha). The love of God, faith in His wisdom, in His being our only means of salvation, in His perfect love for man and His anxiety to lead man to the highest place, His own transcendent puissant place, are real and urgently necessary for man's progress. The ideal of the Iśāvāsyopaniṣad which is herein presented in translation and the Bhagavad Gītā mingle harmoniously with the central teaching of the devotional ecstasies of the Ājvārs. It is no wonder therefore Śrī Venkaṭanātha finding that a final and absorbing synthesis of Upaniṣadic thought is presented only in the Īśāvāsyopaniṣad, commented on this Upaniṣad only.

In all the works that this master has written, there is a unity of purpose, the central purpose, of representing the system of thought for which he stood, of which he was the most important representative evangel for near a century. He has written a masterpiece of logic and dialectic such as the Tattva-muktā-kalāpa with his own commentary Sarvārtha-siddhi. This, in his own words, stands as a testimony to his omniscient understanding and grasp of all systems of thought. His renovating efforts in the sphere of logic are illustrated by his Nyāya-pariśuddhi, Nyāya-siddhāntjana and Seṣvarā-mimāṃsā. His controversial works are his Śatadūṣani and his Paramatābhāṅga, and Vāditraya-khaṇḍana. His expository works and commentaries are the Tattva-ṭīkā on the Śrī Bhāṣya, Tātparyacandrikā on the Gīta-Bhāṣya, Adhikaraṇa-sārāvalī on the Śrī Bhāṣya, Īśāvāsyopaniṣad-bhāṣya on the Upaniṣad, Pāñcarātra-rakṣā and others. His poetic talent and mastery of composition are displayed in his Yādavābhyaśaya (modelled on the Raghuvaṃśa), Hamsa-śandēśa modelled on the Meghadūta, Saṅkalpa-sūryodaya as a counterblast to the Prabodha-candrodaya, and his Subhāṣitanīvi modelled perhaps on the Bhartṛhari's Śatakas and the Pādūkā-sahasra. In addition he has composed 30 hymns on the several deities. He has written extensively on the inner secret doctrines of the Śrī Vaiṣṇavas. On the whole he seems to have composed 118 works, a prodigious output of literary and philosophical value. His works have been acclaimed as of the highest quality by his contemporaries as well as his successors. The famous Appayya Dīkṣita has written the commentary on his Yādavābhyaśaya—which shows the high esteem in which that famous Advaitic scholar held Śrī Venkaṭanātha.

Despite the fact that his logical and philosophical thought had not been paid attention to as much as it deserves by monistic idealists such as Prof. S. N. Das Gupta¹ and others, he requires to be studied as a careful thinker in logic who seeks to supplant the mere ideological theories of idealism by a more profound understanding of the intuitive logic which corresponds most closely to Organistic conception. The instrument of thought must be of the same order as the metaphysical system in which it finds a place. Logical theories cannot be sundered apart from their metaphysical bases. It is true that an inductive study of thought and its principles will yield us a truly critical account of logic. Such a logic, however, should have to presume the reality of its own account. An inductive study of thought will not be able to overstep its own shadow or presuppositions. It must start with the experience it finds, rather than seek to transplant itself elsewhere. It is this demand of realistic thought that happens to be the safest level of experience. Thought, building itself upon such foundations, will finally construct its edifice of knowledge on the surest bases of science and human experience not excluding any experience of which the human being may be capable. Religious and mystical consciousness and even the realization of the Divine fall within this scheme of understanding. It is this that Śrī Venkaṭanātha seeks to achieve through his logical works. In organic hypothesis, thus, the foundations of thought are well-laid and are capable of being intuitive and intellectual, pragmatic and ethical.

To have laid the foundations of this kind of logic is the greatest contribution of Śrī Venkaṭanātha. It is unfortunately true however that this great work has not been continued after him as splendidly as may be desired.

THE TWO RECENSIONS

The Īsāvāsyopaniṣad forms the final chapter out of the forty which constitute the Vājasaneyya Saṃhitā of the White Yajur Veda. There are two recensions of the above saṃhitā namely the Kāṇva and the Mādhyandīna. The Upaniṣad, as we have it, belongs to the Kāṇva school. There are, however, slight differences between the Saṃhitā text and the Upaniṣad-text.

(i) In the V mantra there is added U between tad and na in the first pāda, and between tad and antike in the second pāda.
(ii) In the VI mantra the Saṃhitā reading is Ātmanneva. The Upaniṣad reads Ātmanyeva, and (iii) finally the Saṃhitā-Upaniṣad when recited as part of the Saṃhitā ends with the words OM Kham Brahma.

The differences as between the two recensions are very many. An understanding of these helps considerably our appreciation of the Bhāṣya of Śrī Venkaṭanātha at more than one place. The two recensions are given below. The Kāṇva version is given here as upaniṣad and not as Saṃhitā.

1. In the text used by all the commentators, with the exception of Śrī Venkaṭanātha the Vth mantra first pāda omits the U between tad and na.

The following differences between the two texts might be noticed.

- i. In the third pāda of the third mantra akṛti is used in K in the place of api in M.
- ii. In mantra four second pāda arṣat in K is arśat in M.
- iii. The 9, 10, 11 of K are the 12, 13 and 14 of M, whereas the 9, 10 and 11 of M are the 12, 13 and 14 of K. The two triads are thus transposed.
- iv. Another important difference between the two recensions is that where the K reads Vidyayā and Avidyayā (10th mantra) which are in the instrumental case standing for the ablative, M reads the ablative itself: vidyāyāḥ and avidyāyāḥ (13 M).
- v. The 17 and 18 of K are 15 and 16 of M. The 15 and 16 of K are formed into one mantra—that being the 17th and the last of the Mādhyandina recension. There is thus elision of the second half of the 15 and the first three pādas of the 16th. The fourth pāda is modified thus—Yosācāditye Puruṣaḥ sosāraḥam.
- vi. The 17 of K reads in the second half Om Krato Smara kṛtam smara krato smara kṛtam smara. The M 15 reads Om Krato smara kṛte smara kṛtam smara.

It may be noticed in this connection that the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Up. which belongs to the Śukla Yajus school, reads the four mantras as found in the Īśāvāsyopaniṣad. (Bṛh. Up. V. xv. 1 ff). It quotes the Īśā. 3 and the 9th of the Kāṇva recension along with many others with the introductory words 'Tadev ślokaḥ bhavanti' (Bṛh. Up.

IV. iv. 11). There is, however, a slight difference in the fourth pāda of the third mantra which reads Atridvāmso abuddho janāḥ in the place of the Īśā. text *Ye ke cātmahano janāḥ.*¹

COMMENTARIES ON THE ĪŚĀVĀSYOPANISAD.

The Īśāvāsyopaniṣad is one of the most important upaniṣads which has had the benefit of being commented upon by most teachers of Vedānta. Besides the main schools of Vedānta, modern writers and thinkers too have drawn their essential inspiration from this Upaniṣad. The Ānandāśrama-edition of this Upaniṣad contains besides Śrī Śankara's Bhāṣya and Ānandagiri's tikā on it, the commentaries of Uvvaṭa and Brahmānanda, Śankarānanda, Rāmachandrapaṇḍita, Ānandabhattopādhyāya and Anantācharya. The Adyar edition has the commentary of Upaniṣad-Brahmayogin which also is based on Śrī Śankara's commentary. The interpretations of these authors are mainly advaitic, and yet there are considerable differences between their comments. There seems to have been a commentary by Bhāskara, but we are unable to get at one and therefore it must have been presumably lost.² We shall first consider the structure and plan of the Upaniṣad according to Śrī Śankara and then of Uvvaṭa, the famous commentator on the Vājasaneyya Saṁhitā, Mādhyandina recension, and finally that of Śrī Venkaṭanātha, incidentally pointing out the differences between these three.

ŚRĪ ŚĀNKARA'S COMMENTARY.

According to Śrī Śāṅkara, the Īśāvāsyopaniṣad teaches the Supreme Self. He considers that not all the mantras herein pertain to this instruction. The chief mantras are 1 and 3-8, that is, in all seven, since these alone instruct the Highest Brahman.

1. The first mantra teaches the advaita-nature of the Self; all else are illusion. He takes vāsyam to mean ācchādanīyam, fit to be hidden. This interpretation forces him to read tyakta as tyāga. Bhuñjīthāḥ means protection instead of enjoyment (which is the meaning grammatically speaking, since this is derived from the root Bhuj ātmanepadin, when it means other than protection, (bhujo' navane : Pāṇini I. iii. 66)

2. The second mantra is declared by him as teaching a different method to the ignorant man who is unable to grasp the significance of the first mantra.

This, it is to be noticed, is a serious diversion from the main instruction said to have been started, as Śrī Śāṅkara says in his introductory words thus :

Karmasu avīniyuktāḥ, teṣāṃ akarmaśeṣasya ātmano yāthātmya-prakāśakatvāt.

Na Karma liṅyate Nare is said to refer to bad actions—aśubham karma.

3. The third mantra is merely a denunciation of the follower of the lower path (avara-mārga).

4. The fourth mantra begins with the instruction of the Self. In this mantra apās is interpreted to mean karma.

5. The fifth mantra is merely a reiteration of the fourth. na mantrāṇāṃ jāmitā 'stīti pūrvamantrottam apyartham punarūha.

6-7. The seventh mantra is said to be the reiteration of the sixth, and in the sixth mantra Śrī Śāṅkara says prāptasyaiva anuvādayam.

8. The eighth mantra is said to deal with the Nature of the Supreme Self. Taking the words Śukram and others to be nominative neuter, Śrī Śāṅkara converts them all into nominative masculine just like Kaviḥ, Maniṣi and others. Paryagāt is taken almost in an intransitive sense.

9. From the ninth onwards, according to Śrī Śāṅkara, there is not one single mantra which can be taken to refer to the main theme of the Upaniṣad, namely the Self, or anything that helps the realization of it. In the Avidyā-Vidyā triad (9-11) Avidyā which means vedic karma is said to lead to Pitṛloka, the world of Manes, and Vidyā which means knowledge of gods, is said to grant deva-loka or the world of gods.

12-14: The Sambhūti-asambhūti triad teaches the meditation on Hiranyagarbha and Unmanifest matter (Avyakta-prakṛti), the results of meditation on which are quite different from one another. Because the results are different both have to be performed. In the fourteenth mantra Śrī Śāṅkara takes sambhūti to mean asambhūti and vināśa to mean sambhūti—sambhūtim ca vināśam cet-yatra avarṇalopeṇa nirdeśo draṣṭavyaḥ.

15-18: These mantras are all prayers made by the person unable to practice the knowledge of the Self which has been taught earlier, that is the person mentioned as practising the avidyā and vidyā, and presumably also asambhūti and sambhūti. But during the prayer, in the 16th verse, fourth pāda, Śrī Śāṅkara suggests that the worshipper is begging Him (the Self) not as a servant, but that he is himself the Puruṣa who resides in the Solar Orb (Ādityamaṇḍala).

Śrī Śāṅkara interprets Vidyā as pertaining to the knowledge of the gods, because he finds it difficult to accept the position that supreme knowledge can go with any action, as may be seen from his introduction to the 9th mantra and the concluding portion of his bhāṣya, where he raises this question again in the 18th mantra—tasmāt upāsanayā samuccayaḥ na paramātma-vijñāneneti yathā 'smū-bhīr vyākhyāta eva mantrāṇām artha ityuparamyate.

UVVATA

Taking up the interpretation of Uvvaṭa in his commentary on the Vājasaneyasaṃhitopaniṣad according to the Mādhyandina-recension we find that he belongs to the Advaita school.

1. He interprets in the first mantra Vāṣyam in the same way as Śāṅkara. But he takes tyallena to mean tyakta-sva-svāmi-sambandhena (with which the relationship of possessor and possession is abandoned). Bhūñjīthāh is interpreted as Anubhavaḥ enjoy. This verb being a transitive one requiring an object, Uvvaṭa suggests that it is the enjoyable objects (bhogān).

2. Differing from Śāṅkara, Uvvaṭa says that the counsel to do actions in the second mantra is for the seeker after knowledge and liberation and not for the ignorant man—nissprhāsyūpi yogino jñāna-nimitte karmāṇyadhikāra ityetaṃ artham ūha. Na karma liṅgyate na is interpreted by Uvvaṭa to refer to action done for the sake of knowledge. Nanu karmanāḥ phalena bhavitavyam ; katham mukteḥ prāptiḥ ? Ityetad āsankyāha.

4-5. According to Uvvaṭa the fourth mantra mentions the causal aspect of Brahman whereas the fifth mantra describes the effect aspect of Brahman. Evam kāraṇarūpam ātmānam uddiśyāthēdānīm kāryarūpenoddīśati.

Uvvaṭa takes apas to mean karma in the fourth mantra.

6-7. The seventh mantra is declared so as to point out further results than the sixth, as it were.

8. Uvvaṭa takes pariyagāt in the transitive sense of attained. Sukram and others, being in the accusative case, supply the object, Brahman. The second part of the Mantra is taken to be the result of the seeker's practice of knowledge, the result being the enjoyment of the conscients and the unconscients, abandoning the relation of possessor and possession with them—atha ātmopāsanayuktasya phalam āha.....yathāśvarūpam arthān vihitavān-tyakta-svasvāmi-sambandhairarthais cetanācetanair upabhogam kṛtavān.

9-14. The rest of the mantras 9-14 are taken as formulas to be repeated (meditated upon and repeated) by the seeker. Ita uttaram upāsanamantrāḥ procyante.

No reason is here shown by Uvvaṭa as to why the six mantras 9-14 should be taken as Upāśana-mantras, since they do not have the special characteristic of mantras as those found in this Upaniṣad itself from 15-17. It is just possible that since this Upaniṣad according to his text—the Mādhyandina—suddenly takes up the conjoint meditation of asambhūti and sambhūti soon after the description of the Deity—the Self of all, he might have thought that there is no special reference to what preceded in these verses. And obviously, because there is the reference to upāśana in the mantras andham tamah praviśanti ye asambhūtim upāsate.

9-11 M (12-14 K). According to Uvvaṭa asambhūti refers to the *cārvāka-view*¹ whereas the sambhūti refers to those who hold that there is nothing except the Ātman or self alone—lokāyitikāḥ prastūya (prastutya) nindyante, yeśāmetad darśanam : jalabuddbudavajjivāḥ, mada-śaktivad vijñānam, iti. andham tamah praviśanti ye asambhūtim upāsate. mṛtasya sataḥ punaḥ sambhavo nāstī. Atah śarīragrahaṇād asmākam muktiḥeva.....

1. Most commentators, excluding Venkaṣanātha, do not contribute anything original or new, but alternate in their views between Sankara and Uvvaṭa.

Ye sambhūtyām eva ratāḥ. Ātmaiva asti, nānyat-kīñcid asti-tyabhi prāyaḥ. Karmaṣarāṇmukhā yat karma-kāṇḍa-jñānakāṇḍayor asambandha ityabhiprāyaḥ.

The 11 M (14 K) means that both vīnāśa and sambhūti which mean ultimately karma and self-knowledge have to be practised together by the seeker.

12-14 M (9-11 K) merely repeats the above view. However in the 12th, Avidyā means karma which grants svarga and other minor pleasures. Uvvaṭa's words under the 14th Mantra are significant. Tadubhayam veda jñānī saha ekibhūtam karma-kāṇḍam jñāna-kāṇḍasya guṇabhūtam.

15 M according to Uvvaṭa describes what happens to the seeker after his exit from the body. His interpretation of the words 'Klībe' in the latter half of the mantra is klīptāya lokāya; to the destined world or a world destined by his karma.

16 M. Supathā is devayāna mārga, and rāye means muktilakṣanāya dhanāya.

17. Here Uvvaṭa takes the mantra as giving instruction in the Ādityopāśana. He explains Om Kham Brahma thus: ittham ca upāśanam kuryāt, Om Kham Brahma. Om iti nāma-nirdeśaḥ. kham iti rūpa-nirdeśaḥ. Ākāśa-rūpam Brahma dhyāyet.

ŚRĪ VENKATĀNĀTHA

Next we shall consider the bhāṣya of Śrī Venkatanātha in detail. A commentary on any work should display the fundamental integrity or unity of that work, and as far as possible, it should be a study from the stand-point of historical development and synthesis. Unfortunately in the field of Upaniṣadic thought most commentators have not proceeded from the unitary stand-point, either in respect of its own subject-matter or in respect of its continuity with the tradition. There is a widely prevalent modern view that it is wrong to speak of a unitary philosophy of the Upaniṣads, and the utmost that we might claim is that every Upaniṣad or some parts thereof are possibly unitary in their import. Thus it is held that a synthesis adumbrated by the Vedānta-Sūtra-kāra is not warranted. Whether or not this is true, whether the Vedānta-sūtra-kāra did in fact develop a new theory of his own about the Upaniṣads, we shall not be certainly in the wrong when we assert that every single Vidyā taught in the Upaniṣads is a unitary instruction. It is because this fact has not been paid heed to, there have crept up innumerable errors. It is just to prevent these, a science of interpretational rules or mīmāṃsā has grown up, for interpreting texts dealing with either dharma or Brahman, both of which lead to the ultimate realization. Further the commentator bearing in mind the rules so determined, has to be loyal to the synthesis inherent in each Upaniṣad or Vidyā and to the logic inherent in all thought. The commentary of Śrī Venkaṭanātha can be said to fulfil admirably the three-fold purpose of being loyal to textual unity, to tradition, and to the rules of interpretation. What Śrī Mallinātha has stated regarding his aim in commenting on any work—that he would not write anything that has no sanction in authority—nāmūlam likhyate kiñcit—nor say anything beside the point—nānapekṣitam ucyate—applies with equal force to what Śrī Venkaṭanātha has, as a rule, followed in his commentaries. At all crucial points he quotes authorities word for word from Śruti, Smṛti and Viṣṇu-Purāṇa.

2. According to Śrī Venkaṭanātha any upaniṣad or a portion dealing with a vidyā, should be treated as integral instruction which leads to the highest end or goal of man. A proper understanding will reveal that the several mantras bear a unitary relationship to one another.

3. Venkaṭanātha interprets the Īśāvāsyopaniṣad on the lines of Brahma-sūtras, since it deals with the Supreme Being as Ātman. For as Kātyāyana opines this entire Upaniṣad pertains to the Ātman-devatā—Īśāvāsyam ātmadevatyaḥ.¹ Thus firstly it instructs the nature of the Lord, the ultimate category, and secondly, the good means to the realization of Him, and lastly with the ultimate goal (puruṣārtha). These three are called according to Viśiṣṭādvaitic terminology tattva, hita and puruṣārtha. The Brahma-sūtras which comprise of four chapters deals in the first the tattva—the Brahman; in the second it rejects all views not in agreement with the nature of the ultimate truth already established in the first chapter. The third chapter deal with the means of attainment, hita, namely the several vidyās śāndilya, dahara, and other such meditations. Lastly, in the fourth chapter it describes the realization of the goal of the individual, namely, attainment of Brahman. All these topics are finely indicated by the following hemistich—kāraṇatram abādhyatram upāyatram upayatā. Since the refutation of other doctrines is subordinate to the real comprehension of the truth, it is usually omitted in any instruction given to the seeker. Śrī Venkaṭanātha introducing the 12th mantra writes :

Tadevam upāśyam paramātmalattvam, sāṅgatadupāsanaṁ pañca paramahitam, parama-puruṣārtha-paryantam upadiśya :—

4. The Upaniṣad, contextually considered, is the fortieth and the concluding chapter of the Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā of the Śukla Yajurveda devoted to the performance of works, sacrifices and others. The disciple to whom it is addressed is one who has already mastered the 39 chapters which precede this final upaniṣadic or knowledge-chapter. The implication is that the disciple being confused and dissatisfied with them seeks further knowledge about them.

IV

THE STRUCTURE AND PLAN OF THE UPANISAD IN DETAIL.

1. The first mantra and the second form the first major group, the third to eight form the second major group, and nine to fourteen form the third major group, while the last major group consists of the mantras fifteen to eighteen.

2. The 1st Major group serves as an introduction to the Ātma-vidyā which follows. The use of the second person singular 'bhūñjīthāh' clearly indicates that these mantras are addressed to a seeking-disciple, well-trained in the previous portions already taught, who now, like a Naciketas, is seeking the highest truth not to be found in the instructions and practices so far taught. In answer to this search, the first two mantras give a straightforward and unequivocal direction that the seeker should deem himself to be the property of the Lord, like anything else, and not an independent agent, and that if he performed the prescribed rituals in this consciousness, he need not be afraid of bondage resulting from the continuous performance of actions.

Venkaṭanātha's interpretation of vīśyam is "vyūpyam, sarvadhāre stasmin stena vasaniyam va".¹

The interpretations of the words tyaktva and *bhūñjīthāh*² are almost identical with those of Uvvaṭa, to whose bhāṣya we have already referred.

1. Rāmacandra-paṇḍita interprets vīśyam as vīśayogam—abhiṣiṣṇena kēchīdanīyam vi—nivāśyībhakad-vasar bāhulakal abhikarṇe qṣṣt. (Ānandāśrama ed. p. 2) Śaṅkarācārya writes "Tena vīśyam kēchīdanīyam nirośayogam vi (Ānandāśrama ed. p. 2). Upaniṣad Brāhma-Yogin writes Isa vīśyam vyūpyam (Āditya ed. p. 7).

2. Upaniṣad-Brāhma-Yogin writes Iti vīśyam vyūpyam.

(ii) The second mantra¹ is important in so far as through out it lays stress on the need for actions being done; it affirms that it is the only way open to any individual (even a seeker-mumukṣu), and that he cannot under any circumstances renounce actions prescribed previously in the Saṃhitā.

3. The Iṅd Major group teaches the nature of the Ātman-the Self of all things. This second major group may be said to comprise of four sub-groups, namely the 3rd., 4-5, 6-7, and 8th Mantras.

(i) In the third mantra before teaching the true nature of Brahman, the teacher points out the results that accrue to those who are the destroyers of the self, namely, those who are ignorant of the self, avidvāmsaḥ.

(ii) The fourth and the fifth mantras describe the Omnipervasiveness of the Self. Venkaṭanātha points out that the mantra 4, whilst revealing the omnipervasiveness indicated in the first mantra, speaks of this self in apparently incongruous terms, known as virodhābhāsa in later ālaṅkārika-terminology, as possessing wonderful power. The first pāda of the 4th mantra speaks about the Self as unmoving but swifter than the mind; the second and third pādas show that He could not be overtaken by any one but that He could overtake every one. The only explanation for this is that the Self is omnipresent. The final pāda reveals His marvellous omnipresence with respect to vertical existences also.

In the 4th mantra 'apas' means water, as the accent happens to fall on the last syllable.²

The fifth mantra whilst reiterating in a different manner the previous mantra adds a further description about the Self-being both inside and outside of all things (sarvasya).

(iii) The sixth and the seventh mantras form the third subsidiary group, which teaches the immediate results of realization of the omnipervasiveness of the Self, namely the selfness of all things, both subjectively and objectively, that is to say, absence of sorrow and delusion and recoil from anything and everything.

1. Bhāskara according to Ānandagiri: Yaduktam Bhāskareṇa sarvāpyupaniṣad ekam brahmavidyā-prakaraṇam. Tasya prakaraṇa-bhedakaraṇam anucitamiti. (Ānandāśrama ed. p. 111).

2. cf. Iṅd Upaniṣad: Śrī Aravinda Ghose: p 4 note 2 "Apas as it is accentuated in the version of the White Yajurveda, can mean only "waters". If this accentuation is disregarded we may take it as the singular Apas work, action. Shankara however renders it by the plural works."

cf. Translated Brahmapuṣpin also takes this to mean the water-element.

The sixth mantra mentions the relationship between the Self and the creatures as one of supporter and supported; the seventh speaks of them as a co-ordinate unity which is precisely an instance of the principle of interpretation of all identity-texts according to Viśiṣṭādvaita.

(iv) The eighth mantra whilst further describing the nature of the Self and the seeker, by implication suggests the hita, the good means to realization of the Lord. It can also be seen that this mantra differentiates between the Self and the seeker as attained and the attainer, soon after their co-ordinate unity was declared in the previous mantra, thus once again affirming that all mention of Oneness is merely a mention of co-ordinate unity (sāmānādhikarānya).

IIIrd Major group, comprises of six mantras from 9 to 14. This is again subdivided into two subsidiary groups of three mantras each.

(i) 9-11. What is briefly mentioned in the second mantra of the Upaniṣad Kurvan.....is here expanded and it is pointed out that the practice of works or action should go along with the practice of knowledge; bereft of action knowledge-praxis is dangerous, bereft of knowledge action is foolish. Most of the commentators of this group take the word 'anyat' in the 10th mantra (13 M) and the 13th (10 M) mantra to refer to effects or fruits or results of praxes. Śrī Venkaṭanātha on the other hand says that it refers to the means alone.

Vidyayā and Avidyayā though in the instrumental case in the 10th mantra, are taken to be in the ablative case by Venkaṭanātha, in support of which he refers to the parity with the 13th mantra sambhavāt and asambhavāt. We find that this view is justified because the Mādhyandina recension supplies the exact case-ending required.

Now to the meaning of the words Avidyā and Vidyā. Almost all the commentators agree that the meanings of Avidyā and Vidyā are karma and knowledge respectively. According to Venkaṭanāthā, Vidyā means knowledge of the form of meditation (upāsanātmaka-jñāna).

The most important point to be noted in this group is that a conjoint practice of karma and jñāna is inculcated, karma being

1. Madhyācārya considers avidyā to mean wrong conception of God. Sureśvara means by Avidyā nāśiddha-karma and by vidyā scriptural-karma (cf. Brahad-āranyakopaniṣad-vārtika).

subsidiary (aṅga) to knowledge. Bhāskara accepts this conjoint practice, but he considers that karma and jñāna are equally important in bringing about realization, whereas the scriptural view is definite that knowledge alone can bring about realization. Yādava Prakāśa, though accepting conjoint practice of karma and jñāna (jñāna-karma-samuccaya), thinks that there are two different results, one for jñāna and another for karma, namely Brahma-prāpti and karma-nivṛtti. Maṇḍana Miśra explains the saha in the Upaniṣad as the relation of togetherness between means and end, and giving a second explanation says: avidyā cannot be without vidyā nor can vidyā be without avidyā.¹

This triad of verses according to Śrī Venkaṭanātha also teaches that the means taught herein lead to the attainment of Brahman-Amṛta, the immortal - the parama-Puruṣārtha.

(ii) 12-14 The Sambhūti-Asambhūti triad.²

The ordinary meaning of sambhūti is birth, that of asambhūti is non-birth or dissolution. Some commentators mean by these two terms creation (śiṣṭi) and dissolution (praṇāsa). But as this meaning does not accord with the context, Venkaṭanātha interprets these to mean (1) attainment of Brahman and dissolution of obstacles to it (viz. samsāra); (2) saṁādhi-niṣpatti (communion in trance), and the destruction of all evil tendencies and mental habits pertaining to outer objects; or (3) following a meaning which is given in his Nyāya-śiddhāntjana (p. 162), sambhūti means arcirādi gati (ascent on the path shown by the Arcis and others), and asambhūti means karmanām anya-saṅkrāntiḥ (transference of karma from the free-ing soul at the time of his departure from his body to those who are his foes). This last view is the interpretation given by Sudarśana Sūri, the author of the inimitable commentary Śrūtā-Prakāśika on the Śrī Bhāṣya (III. iii. 33 & 34).

Śrī Venkaṭanātha in his Nyāya-śiddhāntjana refers to another view put forward by Nāṭyāyārya, the author of the Nītimātā. According to him, sambhūti and vināśa mean knowledge and action, vidyā and karma. According to this view there is no difference between this triad and the vidyā-avidyā triad, of which this is merely a reiteration. Nārāyaṇārya refutes in his Nītimālā (p. 64) a view which holds that the words sambhūti and vināśa mean saviśeṣa and nirviśeṣa dhyāna respectively, that is to say, the samprajñāta samādhi and asamprajñāta samādhi mentioned by Yoga śāstra (I. 17.)

1. Brahma Siddhi p. 15 pt. 1 Madras Govt. O. S. series 4 (1937) "Etad uktam bhavati vidyāvidyā dve apy upāyopeya-bhāvāt sahitē. Nāvidyāmantarena vidyādayorū... Anyo'arīha Nāvidyā vidyārahītaḥ; tathā hi bheda-darśanam-epi na prakāśanīyam, tadābhāve na bhedaḥ prakāśeta...tathā na vidyā aikāntya-śrava-rādi lakṣaṇā (12577) vināvidyāya.

2. cf. Sabara N. vi 2: Rik eṣmōvāca mūthunam sambhavāretī, Vajus Taitt. II. v. 1. 5;

The purpose of this triad is to teach the contemplation of what follow after the death of the seeker. These are (i) arcirādi gati and karma sañkrānti or (ii) Brahma-prāpti and prati-bandhaka nirvṛtti. These two interpretations are suggested by the context of this triad in the Upaniṣad as it has come to us. If however, we take into consideration the context in which this is found in the Mādhyandīna recension, it would appear that it has reference to Upāsana or meditation upon the supreme Self, the tattva taught in this Upaniṣad. It is this meaning that Venkaṭanātha seems to prefer when he gives his second alternative namely samādhi-niṣpatti and mānandambhūdinām himsūsteyādīnām bahirmukhendriyavṛttinām ca vināśah. It is significant that Kūranārāyaṇa, who is an ardent and faithful follower of Venkaṭanātha's interpretation gives this meaning alone in his commentary.

IVth Major group-15-18.

This group is different from all the previous verses in so far as it consists only of mantras, prayers purely to be repeated by the seeker at the time of his practice (upāsana), whereas all the previous mantras, or verses more properly so-called, deal with instruction alone. This can be seen by applying the līṅga-principle of Mīmāṃsā.¹

The first prayer is for the removal of the obstacles to knowledge, and the purpose of this prayer is merely indicated by the satya-dharmāya dṛṣṭaye, and this is expanded in the succeeding mantra.

The third and the fourth mantras are prayers to the Lord to lead the individual soul to the highest bliss, remembering Himself, and what he had done.

The last mantra which is usually used on all occasions, in sacrifice, or hymn, or in the knowledge-section as in this case, has a significance all its own in Upaniṣadic literature.

1. The līṅga principle in Mīmāṃsā is the principle of expressive power of the words used. Here in these four mantras, there are vocatives, and verbs are used in the second person and first person; and there are personal pronouns in the first and second person.

All the above have been printed. The second amongst the above has been generally followed. As there were many doubtful points, a Mss. No. 3128 of the Śrī Venkaṭeśwara Oriental Institute Library, and two Mss. of the Madras Government Oriental Mss. Library (D. 319 and R. 3192c) were referred to. In this connection we feel grateful and obliged to Vidyāvācaspati Professor P. P. S. Śāstri, M.A (Oxon) Curator, of the Government Oriental Mss. Library, for readily helping us with his readings. The Mysore Oriental Library does not contain any Mss. of the above Upaniṣad-bhāṣya. The variations have been noted in the foot-notes at the respective places.

ĪṢĀ VĀṢYAM IDAM SARVAM
YATKĪṢĀ JAGATYĀM JAGAT
TENA TVAKTENA BHUṢJITHĀ
MĀ GRBHAH KASYASVID DHĀNAM.

WHATSOEVER CHANGEABLE IS IN THIS WORLD, ALL THIS IS FIT TO BE INDWELT BY THE LORD WITH THAT (WORLD) RENOUNCED ENJOY. COVET NOT ANYONE'S WEALTH.

Idam : this, (that is) determined by the respective sources of knowledge as other than Īśvara, of the form of intelligents and unintelligent.

Īśā : By the Lord. By the all-controlling *Puruṣottama*¹ well-known as entirely different from the soul, in (the passages) "The knower and the ignorant, the two unborn, the Lord and the non-lord" (Śvet. Up. I, 9) and others.

vāsyam : Fit to be pervaded is the meaning. Or such as could be made by Himself to dwell in Himself, who is the support of all.² Thus the Smṛti says "He everywhere (dwells), and in Him everything dwells, Because of that is He called (paripathyate) by the learned, Vāsudeva." (Viṣ. P. I. ii, 12) jagatyām : (is) the significator for other worlds also.

jagat : The group of things of the form of the enjoyed (bhogyā) and enjoyers (souls), which changes into another state in nature and quality (respectively).³

yat-kīṃca : This qualification 'whatsoever' is used in order to affirm that there is nothing whatsoever which has not Him as its Self. (This is) elucidated (thus) : "(They) say that the sense-organs, sensorium, buddhi, sattva, brilliance, strength, courage, body and soul have Vāsudeva as their self."⁴

But (the objector says), according to the rule "Rūḍhi (conventional meaning) overrules the Yoga (etymological meaning)", Īśa herein mentioned may be Rudra, and further because there is no additional word (upapada) such as 'All' (which addition if it were present will affect the rūḍhi and it may then designate Viṣṇu well-known as Sarveśvara.)

Not so (we reply). Since, as in the case of the words Ākāśa, Prāṇa and others used in the sense of the (original) cause (where the rūḍhi is annulled), so also here the rūḍhi is annulled'; and since the quality of pervading all as well as being the support of all cannot belong to Rūdra who is accepted (i) as not being the cause of all things and (ii) as being bound by Karma on the strength of the passages such as "One only Nārāyaṇa was existent, neither Brahman nor Īśāṇa" (Mahopaniṣad I.) "I am still not free from sin, grant me names" (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa), this word Īśa must be accepted etymologically (yaugika) as referring to the Lord of all, of unlimited Lordship, Who is well-known as possessing those qualities (of all-supportingness and all-indwellingness and others).

Though on account of there being no mention (here of Īśa) as already well-known (as the primal cause), there is a difference in this case from that of Ākāśa and other passages, yet because of its use in a quite contrary sense itself there is justification for the rejection of its conventional (rūḍhi) sense according to the Mindri principle.²

Nor is there here the principle of contextual allness³ (sarvatvam ādhikārikam), no such limitation being seen.

(If it be said that instead of one perpetual All lord, we may have one Īśvara-stream, one All-lord in one cosmic age and another in another age and so on, or else we may have several Īśvaras, rulers, at the same time and at all times eternally, but who divide their absolute lordship between themselves by limiting their power to specific regions, we reply):

But the theories of Īśvara-stream and multiple Īśvaras are rejected by a number of (scriptural) sources of right knowledge, which establish the Lord existing at all the three times (past, present and future) and destining all processes.

It is therefore right that this passage refers to Nārāyaṇa alone who has lordship independent (of others) as the Lord who dwells in all (or rather in whom all can dwell) proclaimed in the passages "Him the protector of the world, the Lord of Self" (Tait. Nāra. XI 25) and others; Who is to be redeclared later on as 'Yasāvasau Puruṣa' (Īśā. 16); Who is determined as the parent of Brahmā and Rudra by passages inexplicable otherwise (i.e., which cannot apply to any other god); Who is most famous as the all-indwelling propeller in (the passages); "This is the indwelling self of all beings, faultless, dweller in the highest sky, (divya), the shining one (deva), the One Nārāyaṇa" (Sub. Up. VII.) and others; and Who in the passages "He is Brahmā" and "He is Śiva" (Tait. Nāra. XI. 26) is mentioned as the substance (viśeṣya) of Brahmā, Śiva, Indra and others who are his attributes (vibhūti), as in the case of the world in the passage "This (world) is all Puruṣa Himself." This is enough (of refutation) of the objections of that person who does not know the pada-teaching, the pada (Īśā) in which there is no place at all for the conventional meaning (anyarūdhī), and which is not a compound word.

In this manner having taught the seeker after liberation, the knowledge of (his) dependence on the Lord, he (the teacher) counsels living that has renunciation as its ornament:

TENA TYAKTENA BHUṆJITHAH. WITH THAT (WORLD) RENOUNCED ENJOY.

tena: with that world which is mistaken as enjoyable;

tyaktena: renounced; because of the perception of its (world's) being exceedingly full of faults, being one with that (world) renounced; i.e., (being one that has renounced the world).

bhūṇjithāḥ: enjoy; 'enjoy that group of unprohibited enjoyable (things) which is helpful in supporting the body, which is useful to Yoga' (this) is the import got (siddhyati) from the nature of the instruction and from the context (arthaprakaraṇābhyaṃ).

Or else it might be construed thus: Enjoy that which has been mentioned as the One in which all dwell, the supremely enjoyable (niratiśaya-bhogyā) (Brahman), through the means going to be taught (in the succeeding verses).

kasyasid dhanam: anyone's wealth, wealth belonging to a relative or non-relative.

Mā grdhaḥ: do not covet. And Yama says to his servant beginning with (the verse) "In the supreme friend..." "That crooked mind, who is covetous of wealth, that human animal, is not Vāsudeva's devotee."

This renunciation of desire for wealth is to be taken to stand for renunciation of all things other than the supreme Self. Thus does the Smṛti say "(He) who has attachment to the supreme Self and detachment from the non-supreme Self"¹

II. (Now the teacher) says that he, who has learnt as taught in the previous verse (evam viduṣaḥ), has to perform the routine and occasional (obligatory prescribed) work,² characterised by renunciation of attachment to fruits and agency and others, through out (his) life :

KURVANNIVHIA KARMĀNI
JĪVĪṢET ŚATAM SAMĀH
EVAM TVAYI NĀNYATHETO STI
NA KARMA LIPTYATE NARIḥ

THIS (ONE) SHOULD DESIRE TO LIVE A HUNDRED YEARS JUST PERFORMING WORKS. THIS FOR THIS (IT) IS NOT OTHERWISE THAN THIS WORKS DO NOT GET SMEARED OVER MAN.

jīvīṣet : To show that even for the knower of Brahman living till the completion of this knowledge is desirable the desiderative suffix is used (here).

śatam samāh : hundred years : has reference to generality (prāyika-viśayam). 'Living a hundred years one should indeed perform works that accord with one's fitness. At no time should there be giving up of works subservient to knowledge' is the meaning. That there is no special reason to say that this passage refers to independent actions which are the means of obtaining fruits, it is said in the Vedānta Sūtra "No, since there is no speciality" (III. iv. 13). Another meaning not contrary to the context (prakaraṇa) is also mentioned in the next sūtra : "For the sake of praise only (there is) permission" (III. iv. 14). The Bhāṣya (of Rāmānuja) runs thus "The word vā (is used) for indicating delimitation (eva) Since the context (is) that of knowledge (of Brahman) taught in 'All this (is) fit to be indwelt by the Lord...' for the sake of praising (knowledge), this is the permission for performing works always. Because of the power (māhātmya) of knowledge, even though one is performing works always, one is not stained by them : in this manner knowledge is praised. And the rest of the passage, "Thus for thee; it is not otherwise than this : works do not get smeared over man " shows this alone."

tvayi : for thee, who are fit for Brahma-vidyā.

evam : Thus alone is the thing (that is) to be practised :

1. Untraced quotation.

2. Nitya-nimittika duties according to one's varṇa and āśrama.

Na anyathā nāsti: (It) is not otherwise than this: this is said negatively for the sake of confirming (the previous positive statement regarding doing works which are imperative through out life).

Now (if it be asked) will there not accrue bondage to the knower of Brahman, since there is the performing of works, (the teacher) says: Works do not get smeared over man. In the case of the man, the Brahman-knower, under reference, according to the "principle of separate injunction" (as taught in the sūtra) "But Agnihotra and others (are to be performed) for that purpose (of knowledge) alone, since that is (so) seen (in the Upaniṣads)" (IV. i. 16), actions do not become the causes of results such as svarga and others. There is no possibility of a discriminating desireless man wittingly undertaking to do works as means to pleasures which are not useful for knowledge and to do forbidden works. For (such of) those that may arise there will be the expiation (niṣkṛti) according to his fitness, on the strength of the text: "If one is not free from bad conduct... (one will not attain Brahman)" (Kaṭha-Up. II. 24).

(If it be said that as taught in the Tadadhiḡamādhikaraṇa V. S. IV. i. 13, Brahma-Vidyā is so powerful as to prevent any works from staining man, and therefore no expiation is needed, we reply) But what is established in the case of those who practise Brahma-vidyā is that the only sins which do not stain them are those which are performed inattentively (pramādikānām).

That he whose fitness (adhikāra) has been burnt by the fire of knowledge is not subject to the injunctions. mandatory and prohibitive, is a view that is not acceptable to the knowers of the Veda.

III. For the sake of making one quickly take to the knowledge (hereinafter) to be imparted, he (the teacher) now says that falling into Naraka most assuredly happens to those who commit self-murder, because their knowledge and actions become other than what they ought to be, due to their lacking the knowledge of the said nature and because of having desires for wealth.

ASURYĀ NAMA TE LOKĀ
ANDHĒNA TAMASĀVRṬĀH
TĀNS TE PRETYĀBHIGACCHANTI
YE KECĀTMAHANO JANĀH

(There are) THOSE WORLDS KNOWN AS ASURYA PERMEATED BY BLINDING DARKNESS WHITHERTO THE SOUL-SLAINERS, WHOEVER THEY ARE, RESORT ON DEPARTING (FROM THEIR BODIES).

Asuryāḥ: (the suffix) ya (is used) in the sense of 'Those which manaso javīyaḥ : Having a speed greater than even the speediest mind.

If it be said that unmoviugness and such speediness cannot co-exist, (we reply) Not so, because, by recourse to intention (tātparya) they can easily co-exist. Since all are always pervaded by Him, there is unmoviugness, and since He exists beyond the range of the mind's perception at all times, He is stated to be faster than the mind as it were.¹ In the following passages also, (it) has to be construed thus.

Na enad devā āpnūvan pūrvam arṣat : This (which has) already obtained (all), all the gods have not yet attained.

devāḥ : gods, Hiraṇyagarbha (Brahmā) and others.

na āpnūvan : Have not all this time attained. The embodied souls (kṣetrajñas) whose consciousness is obstructed by karma prior to their gaining that knowledge, do not attain it by their own intelligence, though it is infinite and therefore eternally omnipervasive. Therefore there is no contradiction here.

Thus is it said in the Chāndogya Upaniṣad (VIII. iii. 2).

"So just as those who do not know the spot might go over a hid treasure of gold again and again, but not find it, even so, all creatures here go day by day to that Brahman-world (Brahma-loka) (in deep sleep) but do not find it, for truly they are carried astray by what is false."²

Tad dhāvato 'nyān atyeti tiṣṭhat : As stated in the passages "He who is in the earth"..."(He) who is in the self" (Brh. Up. V. vii. 7ff), in this manner even whilst remaining in everything It overtakes the running Garuḍa and others. "However far and far they may run It is beyond that" is the meaning.

Thus it has been said

"Even flying like Garuḍa for 1,000,000 years, one, though having the speed of the mind, even then cannot reach the limit of the Cause."³

The overtaking of those who run by those who are at any one place is not possible : This is (a case of) wonder.

1. 'To move' means to reach a space in which it was not before. But for a thing which is all-pervasive there cannot be a space in which it was not before. Therefore it is motionless.

2. Trans. from Hume : Thirteen Principal Upanisads.

3. Abir. Sath.

asya sarvasya : of all things having variegated conscient and unconscious forms and determined by sources of right knowledge.

antar bhavati : dwells within ; 'because there is no obstruction, it exists without there being any limitation of space' is the meaning. That same thing exists also outside all these, that is, that exists both at places where finite objects are and at places where they are not. That is clearly declared in the Taittiriya beginning with the "Thousand-headed..." the purpose of which is to determine that principle which has to be meditated upon in all the several sciences of the Transcendent (para-vidyā) thus :

"Whatever is in the world, seen or even heard, pervading all that both inside and outside Nārāyaṇa stands" (Tait-Nārā. X. 1).¹

VI. Thus has been said that all things have Brahman as their self. Next is mentioned the immediate utility of having this knowledge :

YAS TU SARVĀNĪ BHUTĀNĪ
ĀTMANYEVĀNUPAŚYATI
SARVABHŪTEṢU CĀTMĀNAM
TATO NA VIJUGUPSATE

(HE) WHO SEES ALL CREATURES IN THE SELF ALONE AND THE SELF IN ALL CREATURES DOES NOT RECOIL FROM ANYTHING.

yas tu : But who : tu is used for the sake of indicating the extraordinariness with regard to the greatness (mahimā) of the knower of Brahman.

sarvānī bhūtānī : all creatures, from Brahmā down to the plants, Ātmani : In the Self. Here the word 'self' refers to the all-indwelling self because there is nothing to indicate limitation, and because of the context, and because of the nature of the thing (arthasvabhāvāt) (described).

eva : alone. The intention of the word 'alone' is, that even those things that are supported by the earth and others really reside in the supreme Lord through these elements.

anupaśyati : continuously clearly perceives.

sarvabhūteṣu ca ātmānam : by these words is intended pervasion alone, since they are incapable of supporting Him (lit. there can be no support to Him by them).

(sah) 'He', the correlative of 'who', has to be inserted.

tataḥ na vijugupsate: All things having been perceived as having Brahman as their self, from none of them does he recoil, in the same way as he does not recoil from his own dependents. The meaning is, he scorns nothing.

VII. Once again, strengthening (the above teaching) by means of (the statement of) co-ordination, (he, the teacher) says that to perceive it thus leads to the immediate annihilation of sorrow:

YASMIN SARVĀṆI BHŪTĀNY
ĀTMAIVĀEHĪD VIJĀNATAH
TATRA KO MOHĀH KAŚŌKA EKATVAM ANUPĀŚYATAH .

WHEN FOR HIM WHO KNOWS THE SELF ALONE HAS BECOME ALL CREATURES, THEN FOR HIM PERCEIVING ONENESS, WHERE IS THERE DELUSION OR SORROW?

yasmin: when, at the time of meditation.

vijānataḥ: for him who knows distinctly by the method well taught (upadīṣṭhena mārgena) the difference between the independent and the dependent entities with the help of the scriptures, ātmā ēva sarvāṇi bhūtāni abhūt: 'The supreme Self itself has appeared as qualified by all' is the meaning. When the co-ordination between the world and Brahman is possible through the principle of relationship of body and soul according to common and scriptural usage as in 'I am a God' etc., the theories of bādhā (sublation), upacāra (secondary significance) and svarūpaikya (identity in nature) are to be rejected.⁴

1. Bādhā-theory of sāmānādhikarānya negates one of the terms as false. In the example 'the thief is this pillar' the meaning is that there is no thief at all but that the pillar was mistaken for the thief. The identity expressed by 'is' negates the thief by affirming the pillar as the real. In this kind of identity then, the world which appears as existing perceptibly has to be negated.

2. Upacāra (identity through secondary meaning): 'All this is the King', this means that all these are entirely dependent on the king. Though there is here a statement of identity conveyed again by the word 'is' it is only by recourse to secondary meaning we are enabled to make sense out of that statement. "All this is verily the Brahman" (sarvam khalvidam Brahma) though it can be understood in this secondary way, yet it does not fully explain the implicit relation of identity.

3. The substance-identity (svarūpaikya): "The mud is the pot" is a statement of the oneness of substance between mud and pot. This kind of identity is not capable of being applied here, since if there be svarūpa-identity between the world and Brahman (i) Brahman would have to undergo change, and (ii) the relationship between two incompatible substances as matter and spirit is impossible.

4. The fourth kind of co-ordination is based on the Sarita-Sarita-bhāva of Viśiṣṭa.

Tatra : Then.

Kaḥ mohah : where is there delusion ? Delusion of the form of wrong notion of self-independence and others does not happen. This is the meaning.

Kaḥ śokaḥ : Where is there sorrow ? There will arise no grief, even when there are deaths of children or the seizing away of kingdoms and others, because of the realization of the absence of ownership in all things which belong to the Transcendent: this is the meaning. Thus (Janaka) says "Infinite indeed is my wealth of which nothing is mine. If Mithila is burnt nothing mine is burnt." (Mh. Bh. śānti, VII, 19).

ekatvam anuśāsyataḥ : to one who perceives the Oneness of That which has got all existences as its attributes. Obviously here the use of the word 'one' does not connote that there are no other things (besides this), because there is nothing to militate against anything said at the beginning in "All this is fit for the indwelling by the Lord....." (Īśā, I.) as pervaded by the Lord, and because in both the cases of knowing and non-knowing that all differences are illusory, the teacher could not have given this kind of instruction and others regarding such identity.

Nor does this (eka) speak of the substance-identity (svatūpaikya) of the mutually incompatible factors, because in case there is the destruction of all contradictions, there will occur confusion in the discrimination and others between one's own theory and those of others. The explanation of the 'oneness' as belonging to Brahman-with-its-attributes can be entertained, since it is in accord with all the sources of right knowledge. But it is better to take it to mean the relation (of body and soul - śarīra-śarīri-bhāva)¹ which enables us to maintain the co-ordination stated above, because the term (ekatvam) oneness is used in the passage "The oneness of Rāma and Sugrīva" (Rāmāyaṇa Sund. 35. 51) and others, so as to mean some particular relation.²

1. According to Viśiṣṭādvaita the co-ordination is explained in the following manner. 'I am a god' (Devo'ham) means that the deva (god) is the body (form or jāti) and I is the self which owns it or dwells in it or controls it. That which refers to the body really refers to the self within. It is the relation inseparable between the body and the self that is stated. When either of the terms is mentioned it means that implicitly the other also is intimated.

2. The sāmānādhikarṇya between the world and the Brahman is one of body and self. Friendship, sneha or love is also another instance of sāmānādhikarṇya. When we speak of the unity or oneness of Rāma and Sugrīva, it is not substantial identity that is intimated but oneness of love or reciprocal existence. Dependence on the Lord, living for the Lord are all types of co-ordination giving rise to the expressions of oneness or identity, or unity.

Even though these two verses may be construed so as to refer to the released soul, it is more appropriate (to say), in consonance with what has been said, that it means praise of the seeker (mumukṣu). Consequently, the word 'seeing' anupāśyataḥ : is applied to such knowledge arising out of a study of scriptures or to that knowledge of meditation (on the Highest) which arises through such study, in order to indicate its state when it becomes most clear and distinct. It cannot be doubted that the intuitive vision which results here as a fruit of the particular śamādhi is that which is meant, since it is mentioned as the means (of liberation). It has been affirmed in the Śrī Bhāṣya that the word 'seeing' refers in all those passages which counsel the means to realization to the meditation-knowledge (upāsana-jñāna).

VIII. And again the teacher describes more fully the individual who knows the nature of the Ruler and the Ruled, by clearly' pointing out the special qualities of that, which he has to know :

SA PARYAGĀC CHUKRAM AKĀYAM AVRAṆAM

ASNĀVIRAM ŚUDDHAM APĀPAVIDDHAM

KAVIR MANIṢI PARIBHŪH SVAYAMBHŪR

YĀTHĀTATHYATO'RTHĀN VYADADHĀC CHĀŚVATĪBHĪYAM SAMĀBHĪYAN.

HE ATTAINS THE RADIANT, BODILESS, SORELESS, SINEWLESS, PURE, UNINJURED BY SIN : (HE) SEER, CONTROLLER OF THE MIND, CONQUEROR, INDEPENDENT, BEARS (IN HIS MIND) THE REAL NATURE OF THINGS FOR INNUMERABLE YEARS.

Saḥ : He who sees Brahman, the indwelling self of all beings.

paryagāt : 'will attain' is the meaning, according to the principle enunciated in the text "He who knows Brahman attains the Transcendent (param)" (Tait Ānand. I. i). Or else it is restatement of the fact that he has attained experience (anubhava) obtained by śamādhi as in the case (of the text) "One attains Brahman here (itself)" (Kaṭha. Up. II. iv. 14).

śukram : pure, of the self-luminous form.

akāyam : though having all as His body, yet free from any karmic body.

Therefore having no scars or muscles (avraṇam asnāvīram).

śuddham : not even smelling of ignorance and other faults.

apāpaiddham : "That which is unaffected by karmas which are of the form of good and evil (śāśvatsaṃ) which are the causes of

1. Texts and Mss give two types of readings: Govt. O. M. L. Mss. D. 319 and R. 3192 & SVOI Mss. read सोपनेन

Ananda Press ed. reads सोपनेन

Navasutram Kriṣṇamachariar's grantha ed. reads सोपनेन

ignorance and others," this is the meaning, since the Upaniṣad beginning with the passage "Neither good actions (affect Him)" closes with the word "All sin from Him recedes" (Ch. Up. VIII. iv, 1)

In this manner, the Supreme Self who is absolutely proof against evil (heyagūṇas) is the One Who is to be attained, and Who leads one to the attainment, and Who is to be meditated upon by the seeker (mumūkṣu).¹

The teacher describes the knower of Brahman as the "seer of all things."

kaviḥ : He who sees things transcending (all the sources of right knowledge) (krānta-darśi). Or else the meaning may be 'One who like Vyāsa and others, is the author of works that help teaching the Supreme and His excellences.

maniṣi : Buddhi, which controls the mind is called maniṣā. He who possesses it is the maniṣi. 'He who through practices of yoga and renunciation has a controlled psychic organism, antaḥkaraṇa' is the meaning.

paribhūḥ : (He) who is on all sides. He who surpasses all those who know other sciences (vidyās). Or he who has subdued the enemies, namely desire, anger, miserliness and others difficult to conquer.

svayambhūḥ : (He) whose existence is independent of anything else, that is to say, the seer of the form of the eternal Self.

yāthātathyataḥ arthān vyadadhāt : has borne in his mind all things by distinguishing them as they are in themselves, namely, the supreme goal (parama-puruṣārtha), the means of attaining it, the obstacles to the attainment and others.

śāśvatibhyaḥ samābhyaḥ : the intention of this is 'for the sake of getting rid of all obstacles till the Brahman-attainment'.

Or else, the groups of words in the nominative and the accusative may be commented as referring respectively to the Supreme Self and the individual soul. In which case ;

śukram : pure and other words refer to the individual soul, which is purified and freed from all limitation (faults and sins).²

1. This is the reading according to all the available printed editions. But the commentary of Kūranārāyaṇa suggests the following reading :

उपास्यन् यस्य तं स इत्युक्तं

2. The individual soul is said to be purified, when it shuffles off its karmic body. When there is no karmic body it is said to be bodiless and therefore it is without sores and muscles which are incident on the karma-results ; in that state it has no ignorance and other faults. It is then possessed of a body composed [of luminous substance.

Him also the supreme Self (saḥ) surrounding on all sides (pharya-gāt) exists.

kaṭiḥ : seer and others terms are easy to understand.

arthān : created objects.

sākvalibhyaḥ samābhyah : in order that they may exist till their destruction.

yāthāsthyataḥ vyadadhāt : really created : not merely displayed like a magician.

IX. After having thus given instruction in the knowledge that has works as its accessory regarding the Supreme Being who has wonderful powers, then, censuring those who follow mere works and those who follow mere knowledge, (the teacher) teaches the attainment of the highest good resulting only from knowledge strengthened by duties of caste and stage (varṇāśrama) thus :

ANDHAM TAMAH PRAVIŚANTI

YE VIDYĀM UPĀSATE

TATO BHŪYA IVA TE TAMO

YA U VIDYĀYĀM RATĀH

INTO BLINDING DARKNESS ENTER THOSE WHO ARE DEVOTED TO NON-KNOWLEDGE (WORKS) : INTO STILL GREATER DARKNESS VERILY THOSE WHO ARE ATTACHED TO KNOWLEDGE ALONE.

ye : who are attached to enjoyments and powers.

avidyām ; karma : works only, divested from knowledge ; for it is stated by the Smṛiti "There is another power Avidyā, having the name karma, which is counted as the third..." (Vis. P. VI. vii, 61).

upāsate : perform with one-pointed mind, this is the meaning, andham : very dense.

tamah : ignorance, or else that darkness of Naraka which is unavoidable on account of strong attachment to the threefold ends (dharmaṛtha-kāma).

The continued experience of misery by those who are attached to mere works is mentioned by the Ātharvāṅikas (Mund up I. i. 18) thus :

"The ships of sacrifice are surely unsteady in which is counselled the inferior karma as being performed by eighteen agents (or as being taught in the eighteen smṛtis).¹ Those ignorant persons who take delight in these as leading to bliss, fall into decay and death again and again."

tato bhūya iva te tamo ya u vidyāyām ratāḥ : Those who are attached to knowledge alone, by neglecting the duties according to their fitness, enter into darkness deeper than the darkness obtained by those doing works alone with one-pointedness of mind.

iva : Here the word 'iva', like, shows that it is difficult to know the depth of darkness.

u, eva : alone, must be taken along with the succeeding word, thus:

vidyayām eva ratāḥ : those who are attached to knowledge alone.

X. What then is the means of liberation? in answer to this (the teacher) declares :

ANYAD EVĀHUR VIDYAYĀ

'NYAD ĀHUR AVIDYAYĀ

ITI ŚUŚRUMA DHĪRĀṆĀM

YE NAS TAD VICACAKṢIRE

THEY SAY (THE MEANS OF ATTAINMENT) (IS) QUITE DIFFERENT FROM KNOWLEDGE : (AND) THEY SAY (THE MEANS OF ATTAINMENT) (IS) DIFFERENT FROM NON-KNOWLEDGE (WORKS). THIS (STATEMENT) HAVE WE HEARD FROM THOSE SEERS WHO EXPLAINED THAT CLEARLY TO US.

Anyad eva āhuḥ vidyayā anyad āhuḥ avidyayā : Here the meaning of the ablative is conveyed by the instrumental case, according to the rule (of grammar) which permits change (of cases etc.), because (otherwise) there can be no connection with anya : different from, and because there is similarity with the word in the ablative case in the verse mentioned later (v. 13) anyadevāhuḥ sambhavāt. Here what is mentioned is that the means for the attainment of liberation are different from mere karma, and different from knowledge divested from all prescribed works.

āhuḥ : say : 'previous teachers' has to be added. Or else 'the Upaniṣads', this (later) addition being (more) appropriate. ('The teacher) says 'This meaning has come down to us from very ancient times traditionally'. Iti śuśruma dhīrāṇām ye nas tad vicacakṣire.

ye : who, the previous teachers.

naḥ : to us who have approached (them) by prostrating (ourselves) and others.¹

tat : that, (that is the) means to liberation.

vicacakṣire : taught distinctly (clearly).

teṣāṃ dhīrāṇāṃ : of those seers, who are attached to meditation on the Supreme Self. Here 'statement' (vacanam) has to be added (to complete the sense). Or else, as in the passage "One hears of the dancer" which means "Hears from the dancer" the genitive can somehow be made to mean the ablative.

Iti śāstrinaḥ : Thus have we heard : the intention in using the first person perfect is that it is impossible to grasp Brahma-vidyā completely, since it is difficult.

XI. What has been mentioned briefly as "different" he now explains thus :—

VIDYĀŚCA VIDYĀŚCA
YAS TAD VEDOUHAYAM SAHA
AVIDYAYĀ MṚTYUM TĪRTVĀ VIDYAYĀ 'MṚTAM AśNUTE.

11

HE WHO KNOWS BOTH KNOWLEDGE AND NON-KNOWLEDGE TOGETHER :

BY NON-KNOWLEDGE CROSSING OVER DEATH, BY THE KNOWLEDGE ATTAINS THE IMMORTAL.

yaj : (He) who has received the true instruction.

vidyām : knowledge : that which is of the form of meditation on the Supreme Self.

avidyām ca : and non-knowledge of the form of works subsidiary to that (knowledge).

etad ubhayam : both these which have no possibility of opposition between each other.

saha veda : together knows. Because of the necessity for both the main and the subsidiary being practised equally (anusthēyatra sāmya), making no distinction (such as main and subsidiary) between them, it is said that they are to be known by the words "he should know them together", but not because that which has to be followed and that which ought to be rejected are to be equally known (jñātavyatra-sāmya).

If it be said that because at first non-knowledge has been censured there is appropriateness in that' (jñātavyatra sāmya), (then) it follows that there is the mention of this group of two rejectables, since knowledge has also been censured. Further, if it be so, the succeeding passage will not fit in (with this view).

avidyayā mṛtyum tīrtvā vidyayā amṛtam aśnute : By non-knowledge crossing over death, by knowledge attains the immortal :

avidyāyā : by the non-knowledge (works) prescribed by the scriptures as the subsidiary of knowledge.¹

mṛtyum : death, the past karma which is the cause of death which consists in the constriction of knowledge.

tīrtvā : completely crossing over.

vidyayā : by the knowledge having the form of clear vision of the Supreme Self mentioned earlier (verse 6).

amṛtam aśnute : attains the Immortal. (He) attains the Supreme Self known as free from all faults in the passage "This is the Immortal, free from fear : this is the Brahman" (Ch Up. IV. xv. 1) and others : this is the meaning.

Even in case the word 'amṛtam' is taken to mean freedom (mokṣa) (from death), there is no repetition (here), for crossing over death means the crossing over the obstacles to the means (of realization) (upāya-virodhi), and " (He) attains freedom from death " declares the achievement of the disappearance of all obstacles to attainment (prāpti-virodhi-nivṛtti-lābhokteḥ).

Here those who interpret this to mean " One who exists having attained death through ignorance ", having forgotten the uncontradicted natural trend of words and passages and smṛtis, through their own ignorance, by themselves having attained their death exist.²

This very passage is kept in mind in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (VI. vi. 12) (where it is stated)

" He (Keśidhwaja), taking refuge in knowledge (arising from a study of scriptures) seeking knowledge of Brahman as fruit, for the sake of crossing over death through non-knowledge (works), performed many sacrifices."

Here it has been said by the Commentator on the Vedānta Sūtras (Śrī Rāmānuja) that according to the context and appropriateness the word avidyā (non-knowledge) refers to works which are subsidiary to knowledge : " Here the meaning of the word avidyā is karma (works) prescribed for varṇāśrama " and also "avidyā that is known to be the means of crossing over death, other than knowledge, is prescribed works alone (vihitam karmaiva)"

The term 'avidyā' (non-knowledge) which excludes knowledge vidyā, having to mean that which is proximate and next to it, like the words a-brāhmaṇa and others which denote kṣatriyas, and

1. Isa 2.

2. The purvapakṣa of this view has not been found.

others, refers to works which are intimately related (to knowledge), this is the intention. So the upabṛhmaṇas such as "Both austerity (tapas) and knowledge make for a Brahman's ultimate happiness (nīśreyasa). By tapas he destroys his sin, (and) by knowledge he attains the Immortal (vidyayā amṛtamaśnute)" (Manu Smṛti, XII, 104) harmonize (with our explanation).

To those who describe that there are mentioned two conjoint means, knowledge and works, and that there are two goals, of the form of the crossing over death and the attainment of immortality, one may accord a reply by referring to numerous śruti, smṛti and sūtra passages which clearly enunciate the organic relation between action and knowledge as subsidiary and main, (and) the crossing over death through knowledge alone.

In the doctrine of grouping of the unequals, *viśama-samuccaya*² also, where the sannipatya-upakūṛakatvam is plausible according to their respective spheres, to seek any other explanation, is not accepted by the knowers of the rules of interpretation.

XII. After having thus taught that Supreme Being who should be meditated upon, and the Supreme Good (hita) which is of the form of meditation on Him with its subsidiary (aṅga) upto the attainment of the Supreme End, it is now said by the three following verses that the combined meditation on the two fruit-steps of the form of getting rid of obstacles and the attainment of Brahman-experience (Brahmānubhava) should be undertaken as subsidiary to Knowledge. There at first (the teacher) censures the practice of meditation on one only thus :

ANDHAM TAMAH PRAVIŚANTI
YE SAMBHŪTIM UPĀSATI
TATO BHŪYA IVA TE TAMO
YA U SAMBHŪTĪYAM RATĪM

INTO BLINDING DARKNESS ENTER THOSE WHO ARE DEVOTED TO ĀSAMBHŪTI.
THEY INTO STILL GREATER DARKNESS WHO ARE ATTACHED TO SAMBHŪTI.

sambhūti āsambhūti : In the passages "Departing from here I am going to commune with this" (Ch. Up. III. xiv. 4) (and) "Having shaken off the body, having fulfilled (all works) (kṛtāmā), I shall commune eternally with the Brahman-world" (Ch. Up. VIII. xiii. 1) and others, mention is made of sambhūti as of the form of attainment of Brahman. The word āsambhūti excludes it (sambhūti), (and) denotes the destruction (vināśa) of obstacles, which is proximate to it, since immediately after, is mentioned "sambhūtinā vināśam ca : communion and destruction "

Here by the word 'āsambhūti' is not meant either the non-origination of communion nor the destruction of it, since it is not correct to declare pre-non-existence or consequent non-existence of sambhūti which is said to be the means of attainment of Brahman, as the means of crossing over the death.

Here also (the view) that the root 'to cross' means 'to attain' is to be refuted as previously (v. 11)

XIII. ANYADEVĀHUS SAMBHAVĀD
ANYADĀHUR ĀSAMBHAVĀT

Here the word 'that' (tad) indicates the two (fruit-steps) which will be declared presently as needing to be kept in mind conjointly.

XIV. SAMBHŪTIM CA VINĀŚAM CA
YAS TAD VEDOBHAYAM SAHA
VINĀŚENA MṚTYUM TĪRTVĀ
SAMBHŪTĪYĀ MṚTAM ASNUTE

14

HE WHO KNOWS BOTH SAMBHŪTI AND VINĀŚA TOGETHER, BY THE VINĀŚA CROSSING OVER DEATH, BY THE SAMBHŪTI ATTAINS THE IMMORTAL.

1. Cf. Venkatanātha, NYĀYA-SIDDHANTJANĀ, jīvapariśeṣa p. 162 (mem. ed.) where upāśana of sambhūti means meditation on the path of the Arcis etc.

तद्विषयमभिसम्भवन्ति

Here also explaining that which has been said by the phrase 'different from', (the teacher) now teaches the meditation on both vināśa and sambhūti, which are subsidiary to knowledge. He affirms the necessity of practising them by revealing their fruits thus: by the vināśa.....attains the immortal. By the vināśa which is meditated upon, destroying the obstacles (to Brahman-attainment), by sambhūti, which is meditated upon, one attains Brahman. The results of the main (knowledge) are stated here in respect of the subsidiary having the form of (conjoint) meditation of sambhūti and vināśa for the sake of praising (it). Or else, for the sake of avoiding any dissimilar interpretation of the passage "By vināśa crossing over death" which is similar to another passage already uttered (avidyayā mṛtyum tīrtvā) by the vināśa is intended the destruction of egoism and gaudiness and others, cruelty and theft and others, and the activities of the outwardly-turned organs (of knowledge). Therefore having got rid of the sins that are opposed to samādhi, through the observance of the subsidiary of the form of the disappearance of obstacles, one attains Brahman verily by Brahma-sambhūti, which is of the form of perfection of samādhi.

Here to take sambhūti and vināśa to mean original creation (Sṛiṣṭi) and dissolution (pralaya), and then to say that here there is distinction between the fruits of the form of crossing over death and the attainment of immortality does not seem in the least to be appropriate.

XV. Now the following mantras which have to be repeated by one, who is practising in this (prescribed) manner the Brahma-vidyā along with its subsidiaries until the realization of fruits, are taught. In these (mantras) for those who deem the Supreme Self as the meaning of all (names) the words Pūṣan and others culminate in that (Self) through these respective gods or directly. For here, only if this be so, the fact that Yama, Sūrya and other words which self-evidently indicate one and the same thing, will be correct.

There, by the first of these mantras, he prays to Him, the Lord, who is meant by the word Pūṣan (nourisher), for the disappearance of the obstacles to samādhi mentioned already as vināśa (destruction) thus:

HIRANMAYENA PĀTRIṆA
SATYASYĀPHITAM MUKHAM
TAT TVAM PŪṢAN APĪVREṆU
SATYADHARMĀYA DṚṢṬAYE

THE PACK OF TRUTH IS COVERED WITH A GOLDEN VESSEL: THAT DO THOU PUSAN! REMOVE FOR THE SAKE OF PERCEIVING, THE FUNCTION OF THE TRUE (JIVA).

satya : Here by the word truth (satya) is meant the individual soul. Since in the passages " (In creation the supreme self) became the soul (satya) and matter (anātam) (and yet) continued to be itself (satya) " (Tait. Ānand. 6) ; " Then its name is ' true of the true ' ; " The souls are truth ; amongst them this is truth " (ibid.) that word 'satya' is used to denote the individual soul (jīva).

tasya mukham : its face, by which is meant the manas which is like a face on account of its being the support of many sense-organs.

Hiraṇmayena pātrena āpihitam : Hidden by a golden vessel : by a vessel full of rajas (passion) which is similar to a golden one, on account of its being full of rāga (attachment and redness), which obstructs activities relating to the Supreme Self. The meaning of the word (hidden) is : (the mind) whose activities regarding the Supreme Self, resident in the heart are obstructed. The mention of rajas (passion) also signifies tamas (darkness). By the word 'hiraṇmaya' (golden) is denoted the group of enjoyable things (bhogyavarga) which are dependent on works.

tat : that, the manas which is analogous to the face for the soul.

Pūṣan : O nourisher ! who have the nature of nourishing those who have taken refuge (in thee) :

apāvṛṇu : Open : remove its covering.

For what purpose? satyadharmāya dṛṣṭaye : for the sake of beholding Brahman, already mentioned, which is the function (dharma) of the individual soul, the satya (truth).'

XVI. Again exhibiting the attributes of that which is to be seen through the Vision, (he, the seeker) prays (to Him, the Lord) to grant him vividness of vision (dṛṣṭyāḥ guṇam) thus :—

PŪṢANNEKARṢE YAMA SŪRYA PRĀJĀPATYA

VYŪHA RĀSMĪN SAMŪHA TEJAH

YAT TE RŪPAM KALYĀṆATAMAM TAT TE PAŚYĀMI

YO'SĀVASOU PURUṢAS SO'HAM ASMI.

O NOURISHER ! O SOLE SEER ! O CONTROLLER ! PROMPTER ! RULER OF ALL BORN OF PRAJAPATI ! ANNUL THE (PIERCE) RAYS, GATHER UP (THY) LIGHT, THAT WHICH IS THY MOST AUSPICIOUS FORM THAT (FORM) OF THINE I BEHOLD. WHO THIS MAN BE THIS I AM.

1. Here dharma means two things : the first is the ethical 'ought' or the imperative of duty or beholding Brahman ; the second is the liberation of the dharma-bhūta-jñāna, the functional consciousness of the individual which due to karma and desires etc., has undergone constriction and limitation and has been even shrouded. The second meaning affirms that beholding Brahman is the natural quality of the individual's consciousness. In this context however the first meaning seems to be appropriate.

Pūṣan : O nourisher.

Ekarge : One seer ; the seer without a second, of that which is beyond (the range of) the senses.

Yama : all-indwelling controller.

Sūrya : who urges fully (properly) the minds of thy devotees.

Prājāpatya : 'Thou who art the indwelling Ruler of all creatures born of Prajāpati (Brahmā). Or else the meaning of the suffix ('ya') may be dropped in the word 'Prājāpatya.' (Then) the meaning is : the ruler of all those who are born.

vyūha rāsmīn samūha tejaḥ : Annul thy fierce rays which are not helpful in revealing thy true form.¹ Gather up (thy) light of the form of rays.

yaḥ : which is well-known in the passages "Of the hue of the Sun" (Puruṣa-sūkta) and others.

kalyāṇatamaḥ : of greater auspiciousness than all the auspicious which is śubhāśraya (auspicious enough to be the object of our meditation.)² tat paśyāmi : That do I behold.

'Te rūpam : Thy Divine Form.

Here the present tense, as in the succeeding passage (so'hamasmi) is merely the reiteration of the meditation at that particular moment. But if the context of prayer is to be taken into account, here the potential sense is to be accepted "May I behold" (paśyeyam) according to the rule of change in grammar (vyatyaya). Or else, this 'I behold Him always' is a statement befitting the nature of the unconditionally dependent soul (nirupādhiha śeṣatva).³

Te : thy, the repetition is indicative (of the fact) that this form belongs to Him only (that is special to Him alone).

Now he (the teacher) speaks about the meditation on the Inner Self as the I (aham) thus :

Yaḥ asau asau puruṣaḥ so'ham asmi : Who this Man He this I

1. Reading here followed is that of the Śrī Venkaṭeśwara Oriental Institute Library's Ms. स्वस्वहृत्प्रकाशनीयमिदम्. Other editions read स्वस्वहृत्प्रकाशनीयमिदम्.

2. śubhāśraya has a special meaning in Viśiṣṭādvaita.

3. The readings we have in all Ms and printed texts is so corrupt that some minimum changes had to be effected in the construction and arrangement.

अत्र ग्रन्थः । मदा पदानीति वा निरुपधिपक्षेयत्वानुगुणोक्तिः । त इति तदनाधारस्य-ह्यनार्थम् ।

am.¹ The repetition (of asau : this) is to show great regard (for the Supreme Being). Or else after the manner of the passage.

"Yo'sāvatindriya-grāhyaḥ sūkṣmo 'vyaktassanāṭanaḥ
Sarvābhūta-mayo' cintyas sa eṣa svayam udbabhaḥ.

(Manu Smṛti. I. 7)

"Who this (Being) not graspable by senses, subtle Unmanifest Eternal, being in the form of all creatures, Unthinkable, He this shone out Himself."

The two 'thises' should be separated and related to Who (yaḥ) and to the He (saḥ) (thus yosau puruṣaḥ so'sau aham asmi).² Or else (the two thises) are intended to indicate that He is proved by all sources of right knowledge, authoritative beyond the purview of the senses.

Puruṣaḥ : Man : Who has qualities such as Fullness, Primeval Existence and others : Who possesses the form of the colour of the Sun (āditya) : Who is well-known in the Puruṣa-sūkta read in all the Vedas, which is not devoted to (description of) any others, and in other hymns.

Saḥ aham : (HE I) : Here the word 'I' should apply through the individual soul to its indwelling Self.

asmi : am : consequently the word 'am' also would ultimately refer through the individual soul to the Supreme Self, which has his self as its attribute (pratyag-rūpa-sva-viśiṣṭa).

The rule ordained (in grammar) is only this much : "If there be a pronoun in the first person, the inflection of the verb must be in the first person" (Pāṇini I. iv 107) ; but not that (the inflection in) the first person will drop out if the asmad refers to the Supreme Self through the individual soul. In the same manner, in the passage "That thou art" and others, the word 'asi' (art) should be explained. There too, this much alone is said (smṛyate) "When the word yuṣmad (you) is used in a correlative sense or even when it is to be understood, then the verbal inflection in the second person (follows)" (Pāṇini I. iv. 105), but not that (the inflection in) the second person will drop out if the yuṣmad refer through the individual before him to the Supreme Self (within him).

In ordinary usage the laudatory statements (upacāreṣu),³ "I am

1. Cf. Mādhyaṇdina recension quoted in the Introduction which clearly shows the insight of Venkaṭanātha into the construction of the passage regarding yosāvasau.

2. This is precisely the arrangement in the Mādhyaṇdina-recension.

3. The word 'upacāra' means also usage having secondary sense.

you " and "You are myself " and others, the verbal inflections of the first and second persons are determined according to the subject of the sentence (uddeśya). Similarly even here this distinction is legitimate, because those words (yuṣmad, asmad) which refer only to the subject (of any sentence) are meant in the (Pāṇini) Sūtras as words going along with (the verbs) (upapada). The statement however made in the Śrī Bhāṣya (I i. 1) when explaining "That thou art", "Here (in this passage) is not prescribed anything regarding anything", intends the negation of any unknown thing (aprāptāmsanīṣedhābhiprāya): this is clear since this (passage) is shown to be a concluding (passage). And the 'asmi' (am) cuts down like the *asi*¹ (art) (sword) those who affirm that in the passage 'That Thou art' and 'He I am', the oneness of the Self void of all attributes is to be known by shaking off the causal and effectual limitations, because the words yuṣmad and asmad are relinquished in respect of the hearer and the (self) meditator. There is none to be taught nor is there any individual particularly meant by the asmi (I am).

If it be said that at some places the second person and the first person occur on account of juxta-position of such words alone as have significance regarding limitations which have to be given up, then, it is preferable to follow our own thesis, according to which the significance of the words is not abandoned.

Those who affirm that the text means "that " One Existence alone (sanmātra) which is a whole having two parts cannot explain properly the texts "That thou art" and "He I am" and others, (i) because in case (these) texts are taken to indicate the Pure Existence (sanmātra), to speak of 'You' and 'I' in the passages is impossible; (ii) because, if it be said that they indicate the Existence which is qualified by 'You-ness' and 'I-ness', then the verbal inflection must be in the third person (and not in the second and the first persons as we find in the texts); (iii) because it is impossible for the perceivable (driya) objects 'You' and 'I' (yuṣmad-asmad-artha) to have any connection with the form of Īśvara who is a portion of Existence, as (it is impossible) for the pot and the saucer (to have any connection) with the jar made of mud; (iv) and because there is no need to speak about 'you' and 'I' having the form of that Existence specially, they being always perceived (or known) as such - and there is no need to meditate on it either. Nor (v) will asti-vidhi (the command directing one to meditate upon a thing as if it is another)¹ in respect of sciences of liberation, be accepted by the knower of the Vedānta.²

Though the second and first persons could be justified by taking them in a secondary sense due to their dependence on that (king) as in the passages 'You are a king' 'I am a king' and others, yet it is set aside on account of there being available here the same way by which the words signifying genus and quality (indicate their substrate) (jāti-guṇa-śabda-gatī-lābhāt), as in the case of Vedic and common usage of the words, god, man and others, which ultimately denote the conscious (self within them).

If it be said that one might as well abandon the trouble of explaining this co-ordination (of one's own self) with the other who is called (here) the Puruṣa, (in which case) this passage "Who this Man, He this I am" can mean the meditation (by the individual) of his own purified self only : (we reply) not so, because in the (passages) "That thou art", "You verily am I" the above view being inappropriate, here also the rule (of interpretation) being the same as that which applies to them (Tat tram asi and Tram vā aham asmi) it is appropriate to take this meditation to be of the same kind (as that).

Even should this passage mean that type of meditation upon one's own self, which is subsidiary to the science of Supreme Brahman, such as "Having Brahman as my Self I am", then even, the word 'saḥ' (that) (which stands for Brahman) will have to be taken in a secondary sense (lakṣaṇīya) namely, dependence upon that and others.

XVII. Then the nature of the purified soul is being described :

VĀYUR ANILAM AMṚTAM
ATHEDAM BHASMĀNTAM ŚARĪRAM
OM KRATO SMARA KṚTAM SMARA KRATŌ SMARA KṚTAM SMARA.

MOVING ABOUT, ABODELESS, IMMORTAL : NOW THIS BODY HAS ITS END IN ASHES
OM ! O SACRIFICE ! REMEMBER, REMEMBER THAT WHICH WAS DONE ; O SACRIFICE !
REMEMBER REMEMBER THAT WHICH WAS DONE.

1. cf. Mano Brahmeti upāṣita, etc.. Ch. Up. III. iv

2. Śrī Vedānta Deśika here proposes and refutes alternative explanations :
Firstly : Does the passage in question indicate the Pure Existence ?

(i) If not, does it intimate the Existence as qualified by 'You' and 'I' portions ?

(ii) Or does it mean the Īśvara, who is a part of Pure Existence (as Yādava-prakāśa holds) having the forms of 'You' and 'I' ?

(iv) Or does it mean that 'You' and 'I' are having the attribute of Existence ?

(v) Or does it merely instruct the meditation of a thing as if it is another (dṛṣṭi-vādhi) ?

Vāyuh : because of moving about from place to place (tatra tatra) according to its knowledge and works (the soul) is vāyu.

anīlam : (abodeless) : because of having no permanent resting place and because of not residing at any one place (material body) permanently, it is anīlam.

amṛtam : immortal : it is itself immortal though its series of bodies perish. This (amṛtam) signifies¹ absence of old age and others because of the passage "Free from old age, deathless, sorrowless....." in the Prajāpati's statement (Ch. Up. VIII I. 5). Here from a consideration of the passages "Air and sky, these are immortal (amṛtam)" and others, no doubt need be entertained that the words 'vāyu' and the other mean the second element² since the passage will not harmonize with the prior and consequent (contexts).

Even though it may be appropriate to take these words as referring to the Supreme Being either through extended significance (viśiṣṭa-vṛttyā) or through etymological significance (yoga), yet it is better to say that these (words) refer to the individual soul which is different from the perishing body, since that is what is spoken of immediately after (this). In case this 'Vāyu' is taken here to refer to prāṇa, breath, (its) value is very little.

Those belonging to the Śvetaśvatāra-school refer to the soul which is meant by the word 'the enjoyer' when distinguishing between 'The enjoyer, the enjoyable and the Impellor' (Śvet. Up. I. 12) by the word 'immortal' in (the passage) "Mutable is Pradhāna, Immortal and Immutable is the soul (Hara), the one God controls both the mutable and the (immutable) soul" (Śvet. Up. I. 10): and "Verily the mutable is avidyā, immortal is vidyā (soul). He who controls both avidyā and vidyā is other (than these two)" (Śvet. Up. V. 1).

In this manner having declared the immortality of the soul well-known from such passages as "He, the knower is neither born nor dies", (Kaṭha Up. I. 2 18) He (the teacher) now declares the inevitable mortality of the soul's body (kṣetrajñasarīra) thus: Athedam Bhasmāntam Sarīram :

atha : now :¹ The word 'now' is used here so as to introduce a topic different from the previous. Or the word 'atha' means 'immediately after exit of the soul (from its body). Or it refers to all (souls) subject to karma. Thus is said in the Smṛti

"The sands in Ganga (and) the streaks of rain when Indra rains can be counted, but it is impossible to count the number of Brahmās who have gone before in the world" and in the passage "When Brahmā and others immerse....."

idam : this : this qualification 'idam' (this) is used so as to exclude those (kinds of bodies) which are known from valid sources (pramāṇa), as the bodies of Īśvara and as eternal.

bhāsmāntam : has its end in ashes. This suggests all ways of disposal (samskāramātra).³ Or else it also signifies its end as worms (kiṭānta etc.) which are well-known at other places.⁴

śarīram : body. When we consider the etymological meaning of the word 'śarīra,' its nature of being perishable is known.

In this manner having said about the distinction between the conscient and the unconscient in the order (seen) in the passage "Having meditated upon the enjoyer, the enjoyable and the Impeller" (Śvet. Up. I. 12), (then) he (the teacher) mentions the Impeller, the supreme Person in this context, by the praṇava OM; as those who belong to the Ātharvāṇa school read "Whoever meditates on the Supreme Puruṣa with the same letter Om with three mātras..." (Praśna. Up. V. 5). In Yoga-system also it is said:—

"That particular Person who is untouched by sorrow, by actions and their fruits and tendencies is Īśvara". "He is the teacher of all those who have lived previously too, because there is no limitation by time (for Him)". "The word expressing Him is praṇava." (Yoga Sūtras (I, 24-26).

Thus the Omniscient (sarvajña, Śiva) says "O learned ones! At all times recite thus OM and meditate on Keśava." He has Himself

1. There are five meanings for the word 'atha' according to Amarasīḍha : mangalānantarārambhapraśnakārisnyeṣu (III 246). Here Venkaṭanātha interprets atha in three ways (i) ārambha (ii) anantara (iii) kārisnya.

2. "When Brahmā and others immerse and when the moving and unmoving have perished, the one world-soul remains; and He is Nārāyaṇa, the immutable." Reading in the śloka is yathā. But since it appears inappropriate it has been interpreted as tathā.

3. cf. Śrī T. Vīraraghavāchārya's ed. p. 154 who commenting on this says that it suggests all sorts. The obvious intention of the comment is that it does not matter what sort of disposal it is, since this is the end of the body of a soul in all cases.

4. cf. Bhāgavata quoted by Śrī T. Vīraraghavāchārya ed. p. 154 sung "Pronouncing repeatedly the Brahman of the form of this single letter OM and continuously remembering Me, (he who goes forth abandoning the body attains the highest status) (Bh. Gita. VIII. 13).

Thus should one see at all places.

Next making God (Bhagavantam), who is of the form of sacrifice and who is the Object of knowledge-sacrifice, turn towards him, he prays to Him for His Grace thus:

Krato smara kṛtam smara : Sacrifice remember, remember that which was done :

Krato : O sacrifice : (O Lord) who are of the form of sacrifice. As He says "I (am) sacrifice (kratu) I (am) yajña" (Bh. Gita. IX. 16). Or else the word 'sacrifice' refers to meditation because of the context, as (in the passages) :

"Whatever a person meditates on in this world, he becomes the same after death" (Ch. Up. VIII 14 v. 11).

"He should meditate" (Ch. Up. IV ?).

"One who has meditated thus" (?)

But the word (kratu) is (to be taken) through the secondary significance to mean God who is the object of it (meditation).

smara : Remember. Make (us) the object of your mind that is full of grace. Just as (in the passage) "O Keśava. The fact that you remember us with your mind which is full of love..." And it is said by the Lord thus in the passage beginning with "When the mind is steady"..." afterwards when he is dying and is like wood and stone, I remember that devotee of mine and lead him to the highest destination" (Varāha-Purāṇa)¹

To say in respect of one who at all times directly perceives all, that there is remembrance, means only His looking back at what was done previously.

Ākṛtam smara : Remember that which was done : Here also the same meaning is intended. "What little good thing had been done by me, being grateful do you protect me" this is the idea. Or else "remembering all the favours that you have granted me so far please complete the remainder also yourself."

Thus they say in the Smyti "That person when being born"....."

1. Varāha purāṇa. cf. Venkṭaṇiṭha's Rahasya-śikhā-maṇi which is devoted to the exposition of the esoteric meaning of the above. This verse is not found in the extant Purāṇa.

2. Mh. Bh. sūtra 358 73. "That person whom when being born Madhusūdana sees, He is to be known as a good man (sātvika). he verily becomes an aspirer after liberation."

on the final portion of the Sāṃhitā of the Vājasaneyins which is clear and yet obscure, for the enjoyment of the learned disciples.

2. 'How is this anuvāka beginning with Īśā not opposed to those in this world who hold, that there is identity between all enjoyers²; that bond souls are the Supreme³; that there is identity and difference⁴; (who accept) the philosophies of the jains and the buddhists⁵; that salvation is not something to be attained⁶ (since all are ever-free) and that fear of bondage is illusion ?'

COLOPHON.

Thus the Īśāvāsyopaniṣad-bhāṣya concludes, amongst the works of Śrī Venkaṭanātha, the teacher of Vedānta, supreme master of all sciences and lion among poets and logicians.
